Some Good Lines.
Why Did Justina Die?
Ten to One in This War.
Two Queens, Times Change.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

FERRIS BOOTH, who dwells in the Wall street jungle, thought of a good line and prints it.

CHRISTMAS LASTS FOREVER—DEPRESSIONS NEVER DO!

Joseph H. Appew, an able New York merchant, also thought of a good line for use in advertising:

"Christmas cheer costs less this year."

It costs less, and is doubly valuable.

You can do twice as much buying with your money and 10 times as much in the way of making others happy.

THE PRINCE of Wales produced a good line when he said to an association of British traveling salesmen:

"EARLY TO BED AND EARLY TO RISE, BUT YOU WILL ALL GO BUST IF YOU DON'T ADVERTISE."

There's an American swing to that statement, but, American or British, it is true.

JUSTINA UHEREK, only 14, lived with her widow mother beside the East River in New York and looked, often, at the flowing water, and the prison islands from her bedroom window.

What she thought, no one knows. What she wrote, before she turned on the gas and died, was this:

DETECTIVES SAID they "guessed the poor little girl just took a notion to die," and waited until 10 o'clock at night to break the news gently to her mother, who comes from work at that hour.

Before she died, Justina put all her treasures on top of a trunk, where her mother would find them, a wrist watch, her only pair of high-heeled slippers, a string of blue glass beads and an artificial flower.

Why she died, nobody on this earth knows or ever will know, probably.

WHILE THE League of Nations tells Japan "You must not fight," Associated Press reports describe fighting between Japanese troops and Chinese irregulars yesterday afternoon.

It is not pleasant, fighting in a temperature 30 or 40 below zero, making it impossible to dig trenches and compelling the experienced Japanese soldiers to expose themselves.

Nevertheless, they kill about 10 Chinese for one dead Japanese. If this continued indefinitely all the Chinese would be killed, with about 20,000,000 Japanese left to start over again.

BRITISH NEWSPAPERS print pathetically amusing pictures of a disarmament conference, called to end quarreling, "so unworthy of human beings."

It soon developed into hissing, booing, then into fighting.

Even peaceful ladies were carried out in the arms of policemen, kicking their cunning little pointed feet in the air, and offering to whip anybody. You may change human nature, but not overnight.

THIS EARTH improves in many ways, as it swings around the sun in its long journey toward the blue star Vega.

A queen in France wondered why the poor did not eat cake, when she heard they had no bread. And you remember the nobleman that galloped his horses through Paris streets, killed a child and, without stopping, threw out a piece of gold to make everything "all right."

Yesterday a Queen of England spent the afternoon in the Whitechapel slums, to open a Salvation Army refuge for homeless women.

THAT IS a change. And the other day a British justice released two women accused of preventing childbirth, saying that birth control should be publicly taught.

The late Andrew D. White, president of Cornell, tells of a Scotch noblewoman in the time of King James, put to death with her midwife, because the latter had used some anesthetic to soften childbirth pains.

That was defying the word of the Lord, who had said in Genesis, 3:16:

"In sorrow, thou shalt bring forth children."

If childbirth were made painless, as it is largely today, with anesthetics, there would not be enough sorrow about it.

LORD NORTHCLIFFE, who said, "The Americans are a docile people," was right, but we start slowly.

In Paris yesterday a crowd of 2,000, idle, started a first-class fight, attacking police, because they couldn't find work on a government job. And there are ONLY ABOUT 100,000 IDLE IN ALL FRANCE. Here we have millions idle, and those that lack work accept conditions philosophically.

DRIVING IN Union square in New York City late yesterday afternoon, you noticed a crowd of men around a sign, "Army Recruiting Station."

They were not looking for jobs as soldiers—the recruiting station was closed. They were listening to a Communist gentleman, with his sleeves rolled up and arms bare in the cold wind, urging them:

MRS. LAVERNA CULBERTSON

JURORS STUDY HOME KILLING

The case of Mrs. Laverna Culbertson, 35, comely Mt. Lebanon widow, held on a manslaughter charge by a Coroner's jury in the death of her husband, Albert L. Culbertson, Cornell graduate and engineer, November 15, was the subject of lengthy consideration by the county grand jury today.

District Attorney Andrew T. Park personally presented the evidence to the jury. Culbertson was shot and killed by his wife, accidentally, she said, as the climax of a house party in their home, 397 Jefferson drive.

Diamond Defense Offers No Alibis

TROY, N. Y., Dec. 17.—(INS.)—The defense sprang a surprise by resting its case when court opened today in the trial of Jack (Legs) Diamond on a charge of kidnaping James Duncan, 20, when Duncan was helping Grover Parks, of Cairo, in his trucking on the night of April 16.

No alibi witnesses were called, although all were in court.

RICH WOMAN HELD FOR RANSOM

Kidnapers Threaten to Blind Victim and Kill Chauffeur; Ex-Senator Reed Awaited

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 17.—(AP.)—Mrs. Nellie Donnelly, wealthy Kansas City garment manufacturer, was reported held today by kidnapers, who threatened to blind her and kill her Negro chauffeur unless $75,000 ransom was paid without interference by police.

The demand for ransom was made in three notes in Mrs. Donnelly's handwriting received today by her husband, Paul Donnelly. James Taylor, her attorney, and a third addressed to former Senator James A. Reed.

They were instructed to pay the money demanded and a power of attorney was executed by Mrs. Donnelly in the letter addressed to her husband.

REED SPEEDS TO SCENE

Arrangements were made to comply with the demand, pending the arrival of former Senator Reed, who quit a law suit hastily at Jefferson City this morning and started by automobile for Kansas City.

The first intimation of the kidnaping came in a telephone call at 11 o'clock last night to Mrs. James Taylor. She was informed by the speaker, a man, that Mrs. Donnelley's car was at the rear of a theater and was requested to go get it. She believed the message a joke until her husband received the first ransom note at his office today. The notes instructed that the ransom money should be paid either at 1 p. m. today, or 9:30 a. m. tomorrow in front of a downtown hotel.

FAMILY WARNED

The notes warned that Mrs. Donnelly would be blinded and George Blair, her chauffeur, immediately slain, if police or newspapers were notified of the kidnaping.

Dr. P. T. Bohan, an intimate friend of the family, who was at the Donnelly home today, said action by the family in response to the demands would depend upon the advice of Reed.

Police Open Crusade On Soiled Auto Tags

Traffic officers early today were ordered to stop all motorists whose license plates are obscured by mud or dust. The order was issued by Ben R. Marshall, assistant superintendent of police, and broadcast by the police radio. Obscured license plates have handicapped police in running down criminals, it was explained.

POWERS IN CELL NEAR GALLOWS

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., Dec. 17.—(INS.)—Harry F. Powers, "Bluebeard" slayer of Mrs. Dorothy Lemke, moved a step nearer the gallows today.

Guarded by state troopers and deputy sheriffs, the convicted "mail order Romeo" was brought to the state prison here at dawn from the Harrison County Jail, at Clarksburg. He was hurried to a cell. Powers will remain at the prison pending disposition of his counsel's appeal for a new trial to the Circuit Court.

And if the appeal is unsuccessful, he will walk to the gallows here March 18, the date set for his execution by Judge John C. Southern, in whose court a jury found Powers guilty of first degree murder.

Panic on Plane as Tiger, Freed, Attacks Trainer

LONDON, Dec. 17.—(INS.)—A circus tiger escaped from its cage abroad a plane over the English channel today, mauling its trainer and throwing occupants of the craft into a panic.

The beast was being brought to Croydon aerodrome from Ostend. Breaking out of its cage, it attacked the trainer, M. Mathies, tearing his clothing and inflicting deep wounds on his hands.

The trainer wrestled with the animal while the plane roared over the Channel. Chairs and tables were overturned in the strange fight. Mathies finally fought his way into the cage with the tiger clinging to him, slipped out of the animal's grasp and slammed the door shut.

As welcome as Santa Claus, the Navy's queen of the clouds seemed to pop into view from nowhere over the downtown district at 8:30 a. m.

CIRCLES OVER CITY

As if to repay Pittsburghers for the disappointment of its two previous visits under forbidding skies, the big silvery ship circled leisurely over the boundaries of Allegheny County before gliding eastward to its home base at Lakehurst, N. J.

The 785-foot liner had been more or less lost—at least unsighted for many hours. With Pittsburgh's Lieut.-Com. Bertram Rodgers aboard, second in command, the Akron had turned around at Mobile, Ala., yesterday on its training flight to New Orleans. Bad weather was the cause.

All through the night it moved noiselessly northward. At dawn Moundsville, W. Va., turned in the first report—the Akron was there.

First sighted in this district over the North Boroughs, the biggest airship in the world announced its presence by its size.

Amazingly low, it moved over the Triangle. Office workers rushed to their window. School children bound for classrooms

QUESTION CUTS IN COUNTY PAY

County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern today questioned the legality of the 25 per cent wage cut ordered by Chairman E. V. Babcock for all employes directly under supervision of the Commissioners' office.

At the first meeting of the Commissioners since McGovern returned from his Bermuda vacation—likewise the first since the cut was ordered and since Babcock dismissed 168 men from the Department of Public Works—McGovern asked County Solicitor Mortimer B. Lesher for his opinion of the law.

Lesher told him that the Salary Board alone could increase or decrease county salaries, but the Commissioners had the power to "furlough" employes.

TERMED "FURLOUGH"

The matter rested there, to be discussed further late today.

Correspondence Between Mr. Bache and Mr. Hearst On Debt Cancellation

So much public attention having been directed to the correspondence between Mr. Jules S. Bache and Mr. William Randolph Hearst in regard to the cancellation of foreign debts, the editor thinks in justice to both Mr. Bache and Mr. Hearst that the correspondence, which took place over a year ago, should be printed, and it is printed herewith:

Also enclosed in Mr. Bache's letter was a printed copy of the Bache Review, a weekly financial publication of J. S. Bache Company, issue of October 19, 1930, containing an article headed "CANCELLATION OF DEBTS—UNDER THE YOUNG PLAN—AMERICA'S PART—ADVANTAGES TO THE UNITED STATES."

Jules S. Bache,
Forty-two Broadway,
New York.

William Randolph Hearst, Esq.,
San Simeon Ranch,
California.

My Dear Mr. Hearst—

Some time ago, at the request of some friends, I drew up a memorandum of some views in regard to German reparations—which are not novel—with a view that an intensive campaign would be necessary in this country, in order to influence the Washington atmosphere and educate the man in the street, realizing that any such ideas, if fostered by Wall street interests, would be thought to be based on a desire of the banking interests to make their loans in Germany better and would prejudice political thought.

There is no such idea in my mind, but I am guided entirely by a desire to help the general depressed situation. I do not know whether your ideas coincide with mine, but I cannot concieve of any better way of awakening public interest in this country in any such movement, as I am recommending, than to have it supported by the Hearst publications.

In addressing you, I am reminded of the magnificent manner in which you took up the idea of the sales tax when I first discussed it with you, and I am wondering whether you are sufficiently interested in this subject to seriously consider the idea of having your publications lead in this matter.

Any such move by the United States cannot help but elicit an enthusiastic reception by the nations interested, and while on the face of the proposition, it would appear as though we were making a present of part of our legitimate war loans, I am convinced that we are never going to be able to collect all of these war loans, and in fact, I am inclined to think that we are likely to get a great deal more of our money back by this method than in any other way.

Asking your indulgence for this communication—and with cordial greetings, believe me,

Very sincerely,
JULES S. BACHE.

(Letter to Mr. Bache from Mr. Hearst).

November 6, 1930.

My Dear Mr. Bache:

I advocated the sales tax because I believe in it. I cannot advocate your present plan of the United States canceling any more of the debts of the Allies, for the simple reason that I do not believe in the plan.

I think the United States has already canceled too much of the debts owed to us by the Allies. My plan would be to insist upon the Allies paying their obligations and to deprive any country that would not pay its obligations of the favored nations privileges.

I quite agree with you that politically your program is impossible of fruition, but I do not see any analogy between your plan of canceling the debts of the Allies to the United States and the repeal of the Volstead act.

The repeal of the Volstead act did not seem at all impossible of accomplishment to those of us who were advocating the repeal. We felt that it ought to be accomplished, could be accomplished and would be accomplished,

In regard to the further canceling of the debts to America by the Allies, about nine-tenths of the people of the United States feel that a proposition of that kind as an American measure cannot be accomplished, should not be accomplished and will not be accomplished.

I think the same banking policy should be followed towards nations as is followed towards individuals, and from what I know of banks and bankers, they do not as a rule cancel their loans to people who are able to pay, but unwilling to pay. The Allies are able to pay the United States and are merely unwilling to pay.

The ability of the Allies to pay does not depend on the German indemnity. The German indemnity should of course be reduced by the Allies, but not by us, who have neither received nor demanded indemnity from Germany.

Moreover, the territorial question is just as important as the financial question in dealing with the iniquities of the Versailles Treaty—more important in fact. The plan of France was to crush Germany by dismemberment as well as by an impossible indemnity.

If America gets into the question of rectifying the iniquities and injustices of the Versailles Treaty, we are likely to get into a vast amount of trouble and probably be involved in the war, which is almost sure to come as a result of that treaty.

My opinion, Mr. Bache, is

COMMITTEE HOLDS UP REPORT

Attack on Hoover's Plan Renewed; Morgan & Co. Partner Gives Testimony

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—The House Ways and Means Committee, after a two-hour secret session, today failed to report the resolution ratifying the Hoover one-year moratorium on foreign debts.

Undersecretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills was called into the committee room in an apparent effort to allay the fears some members hold against the agreement.

The committee planned to resume consideration later with Chairman Collier (Dem.), of Mississippi, predicting it would be reported out to the House late today.

MAY DELAY VOTE

The committee's delay might prevent the resolution from being called up in the House tomorrow for debate and a vote.

The committee questioned Mills closely concerning reports that the foreign nations were ready to meet their American debt payments December 15, but were informed by the Treasury they did not have to do so.

The committee also was insisting upon changes in the resolution to remove the wide discretionary powers given the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mills was summoned after another savage assault on the moratorium as the opening wedge to debt cancellation was made before the committee by Representative Wright Patman (Dem.), of Texas.

The Texan declared "administration officials must have given foreign countries assurance they would not have to pay their debts."

GIVES HIS BLOOD TO SAVE POLA

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Dec. 17.—(INS.)—Physicians today resorted to blood transfusions in an effort to save the life of Pola Negri, following an emergency operation late yesterday for intestinal obstruction.

A pint of blood was given by Leon Baker, 22, a medical student, who said he was ready to give more if the actress needed it.

Miss Negri was in a semi-conscious condition when she opened her eyes and smiled faintly at physicians and nurses.

Recovery remained in doubt. Priests administered holy communion before the operation.

Dr. Leo J. Madsen issued the following bulletin:

"Miss Negri is still suffering but has rested some with sedatives. Temperature 99.6, pulse 110."

The physician added:

"It is too early to determine whether a second blood transfusion will be necessary."

DEMOCRATIC ATTACK ON HOOVER UPSETS SENATE HARMONY

International News Service

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—The proposed era of partisan co-operation in Congress already buried in the House, was destroyed in the Senate this afternoon when Democratic leaders directed a biting flood of criticism at the administration and Republican party organization.

The plea of Senator Fess of Ohio, Republican national chairman and of Secretary of War Hurley to the Republican-controlled committee to sell Hoover to the country drew caustic criticism from the Democrats.

"Don't you think the Republicans want to give him away?"

Senator Harrison, Democrat of Mississippi, queried:

"Who do you mean? The President or the national chairman Fess?"

Barkley retorted:

"Either one or both."

The Republicans sat silent while Senators Robinson, Democratic floor leader, and Harrison assailed Mr. Hoover's record in the White House and ridiculed their efforts to re-elect the President.

Senator Gore, Democrat of Oklahoma, observed the Republicans would be engaging in a campaign of short-selling if they try to sell Hoover to the country.

Harrison replied that it would be a hearty "ha, ha" and laughter emanated from the galleries.

Robinson charged the President was constantly appealing for non-partisan support from the Democrats, while his propagandists were claiming credit for every public achievement.

Robinson informed the administration that the Democrats would make every improvement possible on every legislative matter submitted to Congress by the President. This was interpreted as destroying all chance for partisan co-operation between the two major parties.

Harrison "sympathized" with the "depressed Republican leadership," who met here this week to initiate Mr. Hoover's campaign for re-election. The delegates he said, were the "picture of dejection and foregone hope."

Harrison produced some of the political advertisements published by the Republicans in 1928. These tributes to Mr. Hoover boasted that the Republican party had put the country "on the peaks of prosperity," had reduced taxes and debts. He inquired whether the same advertisements would be carried next year.

Death in Wagon Charged to Rum

The body of a man identified by police as William Murphy, 52, a Hill district painter, was found early today in a covered hucksters wagon, parked in a yard in Our alley, near Vine street.

Authorities at first believed the man had been murdered because they found an abrasion behind his left ear, a brick near the wagon and his hat some distance away.

Later this theory was discarded and a coroner physician's autopsy showed death had been caused by acute alcoholism.

N. Y. Paint Fire Disrupts Traffic

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—(INS.)—Traffic was disrupted, thousands of persons were delayed and valuable property was endangered when fire burned out the top three floors of a six-story warehouse occupied by John Lucas & Co., manufacturers of paints, varnish and enamel, on the West Side today.

The bursting of drums of oil and varnish could be heard blocks away. While firemen were battling the flames, blobs of burning paint fell to the ground. Four firemen were overcome by smoke.

Postmasters Quizzed In Republican Probe

GREENSBORO, N. C., Dec. 17.—(AP.)—Fifty-seven persons, mostly postmasters, were under subpena to appear before the grand jury today in an investigation of alleged violations of federal statutes by Republican party officials seeking campaign contributions in the state.

SENATE MOVES FOR DRY POLL

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(AP.)—The Senate Judiciary Committee plans early consideration of proposals for a prohibition referendum.

Chairman Norris so assured the Senate today after Senator Bingham (Rep.), Connecticut, introduced a resolution proposing a constitutional amendment to require that future amendments to the Constitution giving the federal government added power must be ratified by state conventions instead of legislatures.

Meanwhile, House Republican anti-prohibitionists sought to harmonize their work with that of Democrats who debouched to the old bi-partisan wet line.

4 FINED, 1 HELD IN CITY DRIVE

Four of five men arrested in a drive on "undesirables" were fined with the alternative of workhouse sentences by Magistrate Leo Rothenberg in Central Police Court today. One, John Ellis, of Cleveland, was identified, police say, by Harry Johnson of 113 Altmeyer street, Sharpsburg, as the man who robbed him of his wallet containing $356 in a downtown store elevator December 5. He was held over.

Two young men were arrested at Oliver avenue and Grant street early today on charges of disorderly conduct. They said they were Robert McCready, 29, of Swickley, and Malcolm B. Hamilton, 25, of Woodlawn road, students.

Both were released on their own recognizance for hearing in Central Police Court.

'Ghosts' Terrorize Wife Of London Lord Mayor

LONDON, Dec. 17.—(INS.)—London today heard that its historic Mansion House, home of the Lord Mayor, is haunted, and that Her Lady Mayoress, nerve-wracked, is unable to appear in public because of the weird noises which have upset her.

The ghostly noises were described as "deep groans, long drawn-out sighs and choking and gurgling sounds as if some dying person were fighting for breath."

The startling revelation was made as the Lord Mayor, Sir Maurice Jenks, apologized before the London Rifle Brigade for the absence of the lady mayoress who was to have appeared before them. He said:

"I think the noises are due to a shrinkage of the wood in the house on account of the introduction of modern radiators."

HITLER TO DARE ARREST

BERLIN, Dec. 17.—(INS.)—In another gesture of defiance against his enemies, Adolf Hitler, fiery Fascist leader, today planned to return here from Munich on Sunday and place himself within easy access of authorities who have been asked to arrest him.

In announcing his intention of returning to Berlin, which he left soon after his world-startling indictment of the government a few days ago, Hitler added another characteristic challenge to foes who asserted he has violated the constitution and demanded his arrest.

Policeman Pursues Man Carrying Bread

Giving chase to a man walking in Lang avenue, near Monticello street, with a loaf of bread under his arm, Patrolman H. Stack of the East End Police Station early today fired a bullet into the air.

The fugitive, however, increased his speed and disappeared down a side street. Patrolman Stack said he believed the man obtained the bread at an A. & P. store in Lang avenue.

Housewives Urged To Lock Up Homes

Housewives today were urged by Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh to lock windows and doors before leaving home on Christmas shopping tours, as a precaution against thieves. Residents leaving the city were requested to notify police so the patrolman on the beat may watch their premises.

VOTE MACHINE QUIZ REOPENS

Another hearing on the vote machine controversy was ordered for late today by County Commissioners E. V. Babcock and C. C. McGovern after Mrs. J. O. Miller of the League of Women Voters objected to the county's paying $407,000 still due the Poole Voting Machine Company.

Mrs. Miller said that to pay the money before alterations to prevent jamming had been made would be to "send good money after bad."

A compromise agreement was reached recently at a court hearing on mandamus proceedings whereby the county agreed to make the final payment and the company to post $500,000 bond against defects. Judge Kider W. Marshall is expected to make formal disposition of the case tomorrow.

JAPAN RUSHES MORE TROOPS TO FRONT

Emperor Approves Dispatch Of Reinforcements to 'Clean Up Chinchow'

TOKIO, Dec. 17.—Emperor Hirohito today approved the sending of additional troops to Manchuria, further stressing the growing tensity of Japan's relations with China.

The Emperor announced his approval of the move only a few hours after Minister of War Araki had made a plea before the cabinet asking more troops be sent to Manchuria "to clean up Chinchow."

Araki pointed out that Japan did not have enough soldiers in Manchuria to carry out this plan, and he laid stress upon the extensive movements of Chinese troops now under way in the Chinchow area.

The throne approved further military maneuvers in Manchuria despite reports that Japan and China would be nearer an agreement as a result of the Cantonese coming into power in China, and despite the fact that Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang relinquished his command of Chinese forces in Manchuria to a man believed to be favorable to Japan.

Chinese Students Again Riot; 32 End Lives

NANKING, Dec. 17.—(INS.)—A new outbreak or rioting, the worst in Nanking's experience, threw the Chinese capital into turmoil tonight.

Thousands of students, remnants of the army of 50,000 who terrorized the city the day of President Chiang Kai-shek's resignation, climaxed a parade through the streets by wrecking the headquarters of the Kuomintang Nationalist party and setting fire to the office of the Central Daily News, a government newspaper.

Police and troops charged repeatedly into the rioting mob. Thirty-two of the students, pursued by foot and mounted police, hurled themselves to death in a creek on the outskirts of the city rather than submit to arrest.

Coincident with the new outbreak, Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, former president of the Nationalist government, who previously had left Nanking ostensibly to retire to his country estate at Fenghua, returned to the capital by airplane. His large silver-grey craft circled Ningpo and flew over Nanking while the rioting was at its height.

Senate Votes Request For Japan Letters

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(INS.)—The Johnson resolution seeking secret State Department correspondence regarding the Manchurian crisis was adopted by the Senate today without dissent.

Secretary of State Stimson is "requested" to transmit to the Senate all communications between this government and all other governments involved in the Far East controversy whose publication would not be "incompatible with the public interest."

The Senate wants to know what part this country has taken in the controversy between China and Japan.

SAVE CHILDREN IN BOMBING

Two children, one an infant, were carried to safety by their parents when a bomb exploded on the back porch of the residence of Humbert Russo, 1510 Alwyn street, East Brookline, early today. The blast was heard throughout the South Side and South Hills. Windows in neighboring houses were shattered.

Russo, a member of the firm of Henry J. Russo & Bro., with offices in the Clark Building, and his wife, Josephine, were asleep in a second floor bedroom when the blast rocked the neighborhood. Russo carried out his daughter, Irene, 5, while his wife ran to the crib for her 18-month-old baby, Anita.

No fire followed the explosion. The concussion tore the back porch from the dwelling, tossed articles around in the cellar, and loosened plaster and shattered windows on the first and second floors of the three-story brick dwelling.

Lieut. Paul Berman, of the Overbrook police, said the explosion was caused by a bomb, although no fragments of the explosive could be found.

Former Lady Heath, Husband in Mexico

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 17.—(AP.)—Mr. and Mrs. George Anthony Reginald Williams arrived here by automobile for a combined honeymoon and business visit of one month. Mrs. Williams is the former Lady Mary Heath, British flier.

The couple was received by Senora Ortiz Rubio, wife of the President, who promised to let them use a military airplane while here.

Parachute Perils, Then Saves Flier

HONOLULU, Dec. 17.—(AP.)—Jerked from an airplane by an accidentally opened parachute and dropped more than 2,000 feet into the ocean near Pearl Harbor today, Lieut. John H. Davies escaped severe injuries. The parachute broke his fall.

GIRL IDENTIFIED IN ACID CASE

Dolly Meyers, of 6226 Station street, sought by city detectives for questioning in connection with the acid attack upon Joseph Virgo, 35, her erstwhile sweetheart, today was identified, police say, as Violet Ewart, over whom Albert W. Kessley, 32, of Canton, O., was shot to death during a quarrel at an alleged beer garden on Puckety road, in June.

Virgo was showered with acid in the hallway of the apartment house in which both he and the Meyers woman live. Virgo was to have been married yesterday to Josephine Merlo, 25, of 526 McDonald street. Shown a picture of the Ewart woman today, Virgo said:

"No. She had nothing to do with this. She's nothing to me."

He refused to identify the picture as that of the Meyers woman. Close friends of the stricken man, however, said the Dolly Meyers was one known to them as Violet Ewart.

Kessley, police said, was shot to death after he attempted to "make a date" with the Ewart woman.

Civic Meet Called In Seventh Ward

Definite plans for civic and political betterment will be discussed by Attorney W. G. Negley, of the Allied Boards of Trade, at a meeting of the Seventh Ward Voters' League in the Shakespeare School tomorrow night. Arch Loney and James Porter, who arranged the meeting, today said that all voters of the Seventh Ward were invited to attend the meeting.

Radio Broadcasts Theft of Taxicab

A Yellow cab was stolen today from Washington place and Bedford avenue, according to a report broadcast by the police radio. Neither Center avenue police nor the automobile division of the detective bureau had received complaints of the theft, they said.

PINCHOT RAPS G. O. P. FIGHT ON RELIEF PLAN

Governor Charges Chiefs Of 'Organization' With Politics on Program

HARRISBURG, Dec. 17.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot today asserted the state Republican organization in rejecting his $120,000,000 unemployment relief program had played politics instead of legislating relief measures.

He charged that the Senate leaders had repudiated their compromise plan with him "as opposition to it by organization-controlled members of the House clearly proved." He said:

"It became more apparent than ever that politics, and not relief, was the object of the state organization."

In a lengthy statement, the Governor told of his efforts to effect a compromise on relief legislation and the failure resulting when, he charged, Senate leaders abandoned their agreement.

RECESS TAKEN

After placing on the Governor's desk unemployment relief measures carrying total appropriations of $15,000,000, the Legislature declared a recess until Monday, December 28. The Governor's program had asked for a $120,000,000 program with increased revenues from tax levies on cigarets and billboards and a gasoline tax increase, all of which the Legislature rejected.

Before the Legislature reconvenes, the Governor must act on the measures now before him and the General Assembly will have an opportunity to attempt to override any vetoes.

No measure has been passed over a veto since adoption of the state constitution of 1873. As the legislators departed yesterday they pointed out that the way was still open for a compromise, for the Governor could issue a supplemental call broadening the scope of the special session to include other remedial measures than those outlined in his proclamation. However, there was no indication from administration sources that such a course would be pursued.

Salus Scores Oil Head In Relief Deadlock

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 17.—(AP.)—The unemployment relief programs before the Legislature have apparently caused a rift among prominent members of the Philadelphia Republican organization.

State Senator Samuel W. Salus, who left Harrisburg yesterday saying that he was through with the special session, was quoted today as blaming Edwin R. Cox, president of Philadelphia's City Council, for the failure to reach a compromise with Gov. Pinchot on unemployment relief. Cox is a vice president of the Atlantic Refining Company which, with other producers, was opposed to the Governor's gasoline tax proposal. Salus was quoted as saying:

"The Atlantic Refining Company is not going to regulate my judgment and when it opposes the welfare of Pennsylvania citizens, I am going to fight. There is not room for both of us in the Republican organization, and as long as it is in, I am out."

CONGRESS GETS SHOALS REPORT

WASHINGTON, Dec. [illegible]—(AP.)—President Hoover today transmitted to Congress, without recommendations, a report upon Muscle Shoals suggesting a 50-year lease of the project to a corporation which would operate primarily as a fertilizer plant of benefit to the farmer.

In a brief message accompanying the report, the President explained it was the work of a joint federal-state Muscle Shoals commission, the findings of which he made public some weeks ago.

The President recalled in the message his veto last March of the Norris bill providing government operation of the huge Alabama project. The report of the commission suggested operation by a corporation which would be formed in the interest of the farmer.

Hill Top Library Robbed of Cash

The Carnegie Library, 315 Grandview avenue, Mt. Washington, was entered by robbers last night who obtained $25 from the cash drawer, according to police. Food valued at $110 was carted away from the P. H. Butler store, St. Ives and Kirkbride streets, North Side last night, police said.

Meanwhile he compares himself with Washington and Lincoln.

If Hitler should come to power, and make a success of it, some would say "Another Washington, another Lincoln," or "Another Mussolini."

IF MUSSOLINI had failed, the people would have said "Another Rienzi." Rienzi declared that he would restore the ancient glory of Rome, and was welcomed by the Pope, as Mussolini, later, was welcomed by the Italian King.

But Rienzi, who fell from power twice in succession, was murdered by an ordinary butcher, who thrust into his stomach a big, sharp knife.

WIFE QUITS HOME AS 'SKI GIRL'S' MOTHER COMES TO STAY

NEW 'PARENTS' BEING SOUGHT FOR 'SONNY'

Model Willing to Give Up Child, But Both Women Await Release of Convict

MINEOLA, N. Y., Dec. 17.—Reunion of Miss May Gledhill, Canadian "ski girl," and Mrs. Inez Conner, wife of the man whom both admit to be the father of Miss Gledhill's child, proved to be of short duration.

An unexpected turn in their affairs came last night when Mrs. Conner packed a small trunk and several bags and left in an automobile for New York. She said the separation was permanent. She said:

"Everything is all right between May and me, but May says her mother is coming to live here, and if that is true I don't want to stay. I've done my duty by Sonny (Miss Gredhill's 2-year-old child) while she was in the hospital. Now I must begin to think of myself. I have to make some arrangements for the four years I will have to wait until my husband is released from the penitentiary."

HAS $14 CASH

Mrs. Conner said she had $14 in cash and expected to receive money from a New York newspaper. She said she would go to a hotel.

Miss Gledhill today said she had gone through a marriage ceremony with Conner in Quebec City in November, 1927, believing him to be a bachelor. She reiterated her love for Conner, asserting they were "going away and he is going to make a man of himself again" when he is released from the Vermont Penitentiary, where he is serving a term for forgery.

Mrs. Anne Peel Gledhill, the "Ski Girl's" mother, took her away from the hospital Tuesday. She refused to visit Mrs. Conner while here and did not accompany her daughter to the Conner home. It was thought she had returned to Westmount, Quebec, but developments indicated she still was in New York and would rejoin her daughter.

TO GIVE UP SONNY

In the meantime the "Ski Girl" was ready to offer Sonny to anyone who will adopt him and give him a good home and education. She explained:

"I will never be able to give him these things myself, and he would be better off away from a mother who has been exploited as I have been."

Already a family in Greenwich, Conn., has sent the "Ski Girl" a telegram, offering to adopt Sonny.

Though May is willing to sacrifice her child, she is determined that she never shall lose her convict sweetheart. She declared:

"I shall go back to Ernie the day he leaves prison. Nobody can keep us apart."

SCHOOLEY TAX PROBE PUSHED

An investigation of the delinquent tax status of the City Treasurer's office, involving millions of unpaid taxes, is being made by counsel on the request of City Controller James P. Kerr, it was learned today.

The trail is expected to lead to properties acquired for public purposes and upon which the taxes are delinquent, but for which orders were issued to hand over tax receipts. Some of these delinquent receipts were returned, after request was made.

The probe into this aspect of the management of the office under deposed City Treasurer Roy D. Schooley, is the direct result of the independent audit being made for the Controller by Price, Waterhouse & Co. resulting, so far, in the indictment of two men in the office.

Unofficial estimates of the sums owing from large property owners run a high as $5,000,000. An investigation as to what extent liens have been filed to protect the city and also the sums really owing, is being made.

Beer Maker Gets Jail Term, 2 Fined

Four men pleaded guilty to manufacturing beer in an old distillery in Mt. Pleasant when arraigned in Federal Court. Emil C. Wenning was sentenced to serve three months in the Westmoreland County Jail, and Leopold Schuler was fined $500 and paroled for a year. Frank E. Horn was fined $200 and with Joseph Welsh was paroled for a year.

MOTHER HAILS SON

In Knoxville an excited mother rushed to the porch and fastened her eyes on the slow-moving ship. Presently the Akron passed over her roof and there was an unspoken greeting between mother and son—Mrs. Clara E. Rodgers and Lieut. Com. Rodgers.

Its respects paid, the Akron moved eastward.

At Ava, O., before reaching Pittsburgh, the Akron paid honor to those who died when the dirigible Shenandoah collapsed six years ago. Over the scene of the crash the Akron dipped in salute by order of Commander Charles Rosendahl, who was lieutenant commander aboard the Shenandoah in 1925.

Fog and nightfall dimmed the Akron's first two visits. On Armistice Day the thicker atmosphere hid the dirigible from Pittsburgh eyes and on October 21 the ship passed during the night.

'Exclusive' Rum Club Raided

Federal prohibition agents early today raided an exclusive East End "club" at 6584 Frankstown avenue, routing several men and women patrons. Gin, whisky, brandy and beer were seized. Three arrests were made. The patrons were not molested.

Agents reported seizure of menu cards listing prices of fancy drinks. The club occupied the third floor of a three-story brick building.

Joseph Debellis, 22; Guy Santo, 45, and Tony Ventini, 26, were arrested. All gave their addresses as 6584 Frankstown avenue.

Prohibition agents this morning raided a distillery in West Second avenue, Carnegie and seized a 100-gallon still and 1,000 gallons of mash. No occupants were found.

M. E. Hymnal Loses 200 Ancient Songs

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Dec. 17.—(AP.)—The official Methodist hymnal is to lose 200 of its ancient songs and 200 are to be added in their place, but the Methodist joint hymnal commission, in session here, refused to reveal the names of hymns to be dropped.

The conference is to close late today, after final decision on recommendations to be made to the Methodist Episcopal Church, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and Methodist Protestant Church.

Ex-Trooper 'Pays' Big Tip With 'Santa' Check

A check for $116.60 signed "Santa Claus" was received today by City Detective Elmer Mallase from Anna Decker, waitress in a restaurant in Lancaster, Pa., who had read in the newspapers of the arrest here of Dean Fortner, of Pittsburgh, former state policeman and alleged member of a gang of automobile looters.

The check was given to her October 18 by Fortner, the girl stated, in payment for a meal which she had served him and which pleased him. It was drawn on the Potter Title and Trust Company. Fortner was held over in Central Police Court yesterday while his activities are investigated.

CLOSET CHILD'S PROGRESS RELATED

Psychologist, at Trial of Parents for Torture, Says Recovery Has Been Rapid

BULLETIN.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(AP.)—Mr. and Mrs. Harry N. Riley were found guilty today in District of Columbia Supreme Court of cruelty to their 12-year-old daughter, Edith.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(AP.)—The improvement in a child's mind after she was taken from a gloomy closet to the light and air of a hospital room was described today at the trial of her father and stepmother on charges of cruelty.

Mrs. Edith Sutherland Elmore, Gallinger Hospital psychologist said that 12-year-old Edith Riley could not count four pennies when she was taken to the hospital several weeks ago.

Now, said Mrs. Elmore, a daughter of Justice Sutherland of the United States Supreme Court, Edith can count without hesitation.

Prosecution witnesses have testified that the child's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry N. Riley, kept her confined in a dark closet for three or four years and that she was beaten and given inadequate nourishment.

BRIDGE BATTLE RIDICULED BY COURTENAY

Players Making Monkeys of Selves, Referees Dummies, Says Headquarters Chief

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—(AP.)—A hot blast from Bridge Headquarters, Inc., sponsors of the "official" contract bridge system, blew upon the Lenz-Culbertson "world series" today as Mrs. Josephine Culbertson withdrew as her husband's partner.

According to F. D. Courtenay, president of the organization, there are defects in the Lenz-Culbertson setup. Some of these alleged defects he defined as follows:

The players are making monkeys of themselves.

Sidney Lenz, although an adherent of the official system, is bidding on hands that Bridge Headquarters never would bid on.

The whole thing is a disservice to the game and no test of the official and Culbertson systems.

PUBLICITY STUNT

Courtenay declared:

"The whole thing is a publicity stunt organized by the successor of Barnum. They are making monkeys of themselves in ballyhoo playing and bidding that they have done no service whatever to the game.

"None of them is bidding on the systems. They are playing poker, trying to outbluff each other.

"Culbertson violated his own system dozens of times. The referees are the biggest joke of all. They ought to throw out all hands not bid according to system instead of sitting there like dummies."

URGES DEAL FACE UP

The only fair test of the systems, which is the avowed object of the match, would be to deal the cards face up, Courtenay said. Then a committee of experts would bid them according to a system. After they had been played they would then be bid according to the rival system and played.

Although the match was a "shocking thing and farce," he said, Lenz was not to blame because he was forced into it by a campaign of "outrageous challenges at 5 to 1" issued by Culbertson. He said Culbertson and not Lenz was responsible for the ballhoo. He concluded:

"And, furthermore, Mr. Culbertson is not a good bridge player."

Mrs. Culbertson Quits Contest to Play Santa

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—(Universal)—When the Lenz-Culbertson contract bridge match is resumed tonight Mrs. Culbertson will be a kibitzer. In her stead Theodore A. Lightner will be Culbertson's partner.

Culbertson so announced as the contestants rested from their grind. He explained that his wife wished to be free to devote her time and attention to their two children and to Christmas shopping.

Since the schedule lists tonight's match for the Culbertson apartment, she won't quite get her wish. But she will be able to stay with Bruce and Joyce and hear their requests to Santa Claus, one of which may be:

"Please, Papa, lots of aces and kings."

Lightner, Culbertson's new partner, is formerly of Detroit and a member of the Detroit Athletic Club. He was graduated from Yale Law School. In his early thirties, he has become recognized as one of the country's outstanding players.

The Culbertsons are now 410 points ahead of Lenz and Oswald Jacoby with 48 of 150 rubbers completed.

BLAME GUARDS IN PEN BOLT

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Dec. 17.—(AP.)—Laxity among guards which he said had grown up prior to last week's convict break at Leavenworth federal penitentiary was critized today by Sanford Bates, director of federal prisons, but he reported his investigation showed that Warden T. B. White "acted in a brave and resourceful manner."

The Washington official said there was "every hope" of bringing to justice the persons guilty of smuggling into the prison the firearms used by the seven convicts who kidnapped the warden and fled. He said, however, details could not be revealed at this time.

Man Accuses Self In Effort to Join Pal in Jail

The world was a dreary place for Charles Swank, 49, after his pal, Jim Murray, 45, was sent to jail for vagrancy.

Swank's first effort to get to jail was successful. He hurled a brick through the window of the P. H. Butler store at Roslyn and Noble streets, Swissvale, and then gave himself up. After spending the night in the borough lockup, he was freed. He returned to prefer charges against himself so that he "could go up with Jim."

HINT MAIL GEM SMUGGLING

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—(Universal)—The possibility that consular mail pouches might prove the vehicles for an international gem smuggling operation of wide range was made the impetus today here for careful scrutiny of the New York Custom House.

The quiz got under way when Henry C. Stuart, deputy collector of the port, said a prominent local realty and mortgage broker called at his office to voluntarily declare a valuable diamond. He said that the diamond had come from a relative of his wife in France, in the mail of the French consulate.

The declarer added that the gem had been forwarded in this fashion, not through any hope of cheating the customs, but in order to protect the diamond in passage.

The simplicity with which the diamond had come through gave the Treasury Department the notion that if one, why not many. The diamond in question was valued at $20,000.

New Rules Planned For Grape Products

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(INS.)—New regulations pertaining to the sale and distribution of many grape concentrate products were under consideration today at the Prohibition Bureau.

Commissioner Amos W. W. Woodcock held a conference with Attorney General Mitchell and Assistant Attorney General G. A. Youngquist and later will discuss the situation with Mable Walker Willebrandt, former assistant attorney general, now counsel for Fruit Industries, Inc., of California.

Forhan, Wed in '89, Seeks Reno Divorce

RENO, Nev., Dec. 17.—(AP.)—Richard Joseph Forhan, originator of a tooth paste formula, has filed suit for divorce from Julia Ann Forhan, alleging five years of separation. The couple married in Denver, August 30, 1889. They have three grown daughters.

Switzerland Elects Motta President

BERNE, Dec. 17.—(AP.)—Giuseppe Motta was elected president of Switzerland today by the federal Assembly. It is the first time he has been elected to the office.

GETS BULLET AS DEATH THREAT

A .38 caliber bullet wrapped in cotton and inclosed in a box with a short warning was received today by John L. Shaefer, 106 Waldorf street, North Side.

The unsigned note read:

"You one and me one."

Schaefer, who conducts a real estate and insurance business from his residence, asked North Side police to watch his home. Schaefer told them he was unaware of any enemies and could not account for the threat. The threat, mailed from the Arsenal Postoffice, was referred to postal inspectors.

BOARD OPPOSES EDITOR IN ROW

The board of directors of the North Side Chamber of Commerce today defended J. J. Kassouf, the chamber's secretary, from the ire of Editor J. G. Shaw, of the North Side Ledger.

In a resolution declaring the newspaper attack as "misleading and false," the board said that Kassouf took no action that had not been previously authorized by the board.

The trouble between Kassouf and Shaw was aired in North Side Police Court yesterday where Shaw accused the board secretary of kicking and beating him. Kassouf was discharged.

However, Shaw made information against Kassouf on an assault and battery charge before Justice of the Peace Arthur A. Davis, of Emsworth. The warrant was to be served on Kassauf today.

State Advances Pay For Elmira Teachers

ELMIRA, N. Y., Dec. 17.—(AP.)—New York state has come to the aid of Elmira's teachers, who were facing Christmas without a payday because the city had no money. The state sent word that $67,000 was being advanced the city from school aid funds due in January. This will cover the school payroll.

Other city employes, however, had no promise of December salaries.

Prince Kills Officer, Commits Suicide

VIENNA, Dec. 17.—(AP.)—A report from Kishinev, Bessarabia, said the young Prince Serge Cantacuzene, employed at a bank there, committed suicide after fatally wounding a bank inspector, who had accused him of falsifying the bank's books.

Estelle May Abandon Suit Against Dempsey

By WALLACE X. RAWLES
International News Service.

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 17.—"I may drop my California divorce suit against Jack."

Estelle Taylor, beautiful stage and screen star, made that declaration today following her return from stage appearances in the East. She referred to the suit she filed here against Jack Dempsey, ex-heavyweight champion, who had obtained a Reno decree. She said:

"I plan to consult my attorney over the property settlement, and if it is arranged satisfactorily to me, I will have the divorce suit dismissed."

The settlement would involve property worth $300,000.

Miss Taylor was staying at the Los Feliz avenue $100,000 home in which she and Dempsey passed many happy days following their romantic courtship and marriage. She declared:

"I had planned to attack the validity of the divorce Jack got in Reno. I'm a resident of California. I could go through with the divorce suit here, but I'm eager to get it all settled and go back to work."

Certain of Dempsey's California property now is tied up by injunction pending Miss Taylor's decision.

'Daddy' Browning to Tell Of Rides With Blondes

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—(INS.)—Edward (Daddy) Browning today waited in Supreme Court for the last witnesses for his wife, 21-year-old "Peaches" Browning, to testify in her suit for absolute divorce so he himself could go on the witness stand and tell his own story of what happened on the automobile rides on which he took two pretty blonde sisters.

The two girls, Marion and Evelyn Jenis, preceded the man who played god-father to a number of Cinderellas on the stand and denied torrid testimony about those rides given by Browning's chauffeur and a detective in such lurid details that Justice Walsh excluded women spectators from the courtroom.

Harry J. Connor, private detective, and John Guishaw, the chauffeur, testified that Browning's Rolls-Royce on the trips with the sisters disclosed one of them on his lap, and that "Daddy" called her crooningly:

"Oh, Baby Face!"

The girls, however, declared Browning was "a perfect gentleman."

Browning was expected to tell from the stand that his interest in the sisters was purely platonic, and that he had cured one of them of an ailment by placing her on a diet.

It was recalled that at one time he announced he kept fit physically himself through consumption of large quantities of lettuce, raw carrots and oats.

MORATORIUM ASSAILED IN HOUSE

firm of Morgan & Co., which acts as fiscal agents for the British, French and Belgian governments.

Davison said that most of the foreign governments had funds on deposit in New York prior to December 15 [illegible] of the indebtedness, involving a total of $125,000,000.

U. S. BONDS DEPRESSED

The effect of the Hoover moratorium, Parman asserted, was to drive Liberty bonds below par for the first time in years.

In support of his contention that foreign governments have no intention of resuming payments, he cited that they have made no purchases of Liberty bonds on the present price cut, although if they intended to resume payments they could have profited enormously by Liberty bond purchases.

Pointing out that Great Britain had funded her debt to U. S. at Liberty bonds which sell them to pay, Parman asserted they had [illegible] the Hoover moratorium. He said:

VOTE DELAYED

The committee's original plan to take testimony on appeals for the Hoover moratorium before [illegible] to pursue has been smashed by the delay [illegible] of Representatives McFadden, Republican, of Pennsylvania, and Rankin, Democrat, of Mississippi.

McFadden demanded the committee first look into charges against Secretary Mellon, Undersecretary Mills, Under-Secretary Castle and Assistant Secretary Gilbert, all officials from the State Department, for its hearing, although he said proposals from members there would demand copies of the Franco-American agreement and the London protocol.

As the hearing was going on, McFadden demanded a congressional investigation into the Federal Reserve Board and Bank. No action was taken on the resolution for an investigation.

At the same time the Pennsylvanian [illegible] investigation of his charges against President Hoover which led to mention of the word "impeachment."

FREED OF PLEDGE

McFadden and Rankin both declared that members of Congress have been freed from the pledges they made to support the moratorium because the Franco-American agreement changed the original moratorium and the London protocol further altered it. Expressing amazement that the committee did not have the information, Rankin demanded the committee obtain a note which he said France sent to the State Department recently stating that if she cuts German reparations the United States must cut her debt.

McFadden renewed his attack on the administration when he said that while high officials declare they are against cancellation whenever they emerge from a conference the United States finds there is a reduction. He added:

"I do not hesitate to predict in three months there will be a conference in Europe in which the United States is asked to reduce the debts."

Experts Hold Up Plan For Debt Parley

BASEL, Switzerland, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Members of the Young Plan committee examining Germany's capacity to pay reparations are holding up the recommendations as to the time and place for an international conference on this matter until after the American Congress has acted on the Hoover moratorium.

The interested powers, it was said, are unwilling to make any definite plans in this respect until the outcome in Washington is known. It is expected that the conference which will approve or reject the Young Plan committee's report will be held in the middle of January, probably at Geneva or Brussels.

Correspondence Between Bache, Hearst on Debt Cancellation

Mr. Bache's Letter

weighing so heavily on the business world.

Dr. Schacht, since his arrival in this country, has been outspoken in expressing his unofficial opinion that it is only a question of time when Germany will be compelled to ask the Allies for a moratorium on its reparation payments.

Any economist who will carefully review the situation and inform himself of the condition of German finances will concur with Dr. Schacht. In fact, figures show that Germany has never paid any reparations in excess of the actual money loaned to it by other nations. It had no resources of its own out of which to pay these reparations which in the final analysis can only be paid out of an export balance which Germany has not yet acquired to any extent.

The day that Germany ceases the payment of reparations the Allies with the exception of England, who have contracts other the war loans to pay money to the United States, will cease payment under those contracts and we have no way to enforce payment thereunder.

It seems therefore, patent that beyond the English payments we have little to hope for from the German reparations, once payment stops. It is unlikely that France will endeavor to compel payment by force, since a renewed invasion of Germany by French troops would so demoralize the German situation as to make payments still more hopeless.

I have therefore arrived at the conclusion that if the United States were promptly to call a conference of the Allies represented in Paris when the Young Plan was evolved and offer to its debtors, including England, to reduce their payments in proportion to each of their debtor's share in the conditional payments contemplated by the Young Plan, on condition that these debtors cancel those conditional payments, the very fact that Germany would thus be relieved of one-third of the amount fixed as indemnity under the Young Plan would so improve the morale of the German nation as well as its credit, that it would make it quite probable that the unconditional payments could be made, and the United States would thus recover far more from these war loans than under present conditions it is ever likely to receive.

The effect of the announcement of such a program would be so inspiring as to immediately dissipate the heavy clouds hanging over the financial future of the world. In fact, it would bring moneys to the United States which personally I am convinced it would otherwise never receive. It would so immeasurably improve the standing of the United States in the community of nations, that such action by us would become an asset and remove a liability.

The unconditional payments agreed upon in the Young Plan are $163,000,000. The conditional payments amount to $314,000,000. It is these latter, which at best will never be collected, which I am asking the United States to lose.

I appreciate that politically this program is seemingly impossible of fruition. So did the repeal of the Volstead act appear less than 12 months ago.

There is only one way by which such a program could become successful. It would be by the formation of a group of great industrialists, if possible headed by Mr. Owen D. Young, the expenses of which everyone would gladly contribute to educate the voting public of the United States into a realization that at best the man in the street has little interest in the sums which the United States might recover from these German indemnities, since the great mass of people do not pay taxes, whereas every factor in our community is interested in securing a better price for what he has to sell, whether commodity or labor—which would surely result in an improvement in the world's status.

This movement must come from the great industrialists whose following can be counted in the number of voters they employ. It cannot come from the bankers, who would be accused of trying to make their loans good. It is a movement worthy of great leaders. Once started it is bound to succeed. The announcement of the formation of such a committee would immediately start to improve world sentiment.

Mr. Hearst's Letter

that we are out of those complications and ought to stay out. We have asked for no direct indemnity from Germany. We have asked for only part payment of the debts which the Allies owe us.

The whole situation has been settled on this basis and the only advantage that we get out of the situation is that it has been settled.

I not only do not intend to advocate any further reductions in the debts the Allies owe this country, but I will certainly vigorously oppose any such proposal.

Of course you realize perfectly that there is nothing personal in my attitude. I would be very pleased to do anything to oblige you if it did not involve a principle which I cannot compromise.

Sincerely,
W. R. HEARST.

POLICEMAN HIT WITH AX

Frank Dolas, 43, of Arch street, Verona, was held by police today after he is alleged to have attacked Patrolman William A. Bright, 32, of Verona, with an ax. The policeman went to the Dolas home to investigate a complaint of his wife that he had evicted her and was smashing furniture. Bright was severely slashed in the left arm.

According to police, Dolas met Patrolmen Bright and George Walker with an ax, slashing Bright in the arm before he was overpowered by Walker and Edward McDade, of Popular street. Bright was taken to the Pittsburgh Hospital where seven stitches were required to close the wound, police said.

Prosecutor's Death Blamed on Liquor

DENVER, Col., Dec. 17.—(AP)—Mystery surrounding the death of Joseph E. Graves, assistant district attorney, whose battered body was found in a parked motor car Tuesday night, has been dissipated by a coroner's report attributing it to alcoholic heart shock.

Glen O. De Puy, who was with Graves before his death, was released from the county jail last night after signing a statement asserting Graves had been in a drunken stupor and that he had fallen from their car in a scuffle over who should drive.

AN ORDINANCE—Further Amending Sub-paragraph (a) of Section 8 of Ordinance No. 101, entitled, An Ordinance regulating the construction, alteration, additions to, arrangement, equipment and the use and occupancy of buildings used for the storage, repair or housing of self-propelled vehicles containing volatile or highly inflammable fuel, which shall hereafter be known as Buildings of Classification No. VII, and its sub-divisions, regulating the installation of storage systems for volatile or highly inflammable fuel, regulating the installation therein of heating, ventilating and lighting systems, providing for the issuance of construction and occupancy permits therefor, and providing penalties for violations of the provisions hereof," approved April 4, 1921, as amended by Ordinance approved July 31, 1929.

SECTION 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the City of Pittsburgh, in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same, That Sub-paragraph (a) of Section 8 of Ordinance No. 101, entitled, "An Ordinance regulating the construction, alteration, additions to, arrangement, equipment and the use and occupancy of buildings used for the storage, repair or housing of self-propelled vehicles containing volatile or highly inflammable fuel, which shall hereafter be known as Buildings of Classification No. VII, and its sub-divisions, regulating the installation of storage systems for volatile or highly inflammable fuel, regulating the installation therein of heating, ventilating and lighting systems, providing for the issuance of construction and occupancy permits therefor, and providing penalties for violations of the provisions hereof," approved April 4, 1921, as amended by Ordinance approved July 31, 1929, shall be and the same is hereby further amended by adding the following:

THIS PARAGRAPH shall not apply to self-contained, gas-fired heating units which are designed for cooling suspended ceilings, provided they have a closed combustion chamber, which is supplied with air under pressure for both primary and secondary combustion and from a motor-driven fan attached to and being an integral part of the unit, and the heated air being driven from the unit by said motor-driven fan. Such gas heating units are to bear the approval seal of the American Gas Association Laboratories, and are to be approved for use in garages by the Underwriters' Laboratories. Such gas units shall be vented as provided by Ordinance of Council.

AN ORDINANCE—Regulating the taking of bonds by the City of Pittsburgh from contractors to secure the payment of material and labor furnished, supplied or performed.

SECTION 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the City of Pittsburgh, in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same, That in addition to any other bond required by law to be taken in connection with a contract for the construction, erection, installation, completion, alteration, repair of or addition to any public work or improvement of any kind whatsoever, the department entering into any contract shall execute and deliver a further bond with one or more surety companies legally authorized to do business in this Commonwealth as sureties thereon. Said bond shall be for a sum of not less than fifty per centum (50%) and not more than one hundred per centum (100%) of the contract, and the director or head of the department entering into the contract may demand a bond for an amount in excess of fifty per centum (50%) and not more than one hundred per centum (100%), if in his judgment such increased amount is necessary for the security of the work. Such bond shall contain a clause to the effect that—

"Every person, co-partnership, association or corporation who, whether as subcontractor or otherwise, has furnished material or supplied or performed labor in the prosecution of the work under the contract, and who has not been paid therefor, may sue in assumpsit on said bond in the name of the City of Pittsburgh for his or their use, and prosecute the same to final judgment for such sum or sums as may be justly due him, them or it, and have execution thereon; provided however, that the municipality shall not be liable for the payment of any costs or expense of such suit."

Said bond shall contain a provision that suit shall not be entered thereon after one (1) year from the date of the final settlement under said contract by the City of Pittsburgh with the contractor executing the bond.

SECTION 2. That any Ordinance or part of Ordinance, conflicting with the provisions of this Ordinance, be and the same is hereby repealed so far as the same affects this Ordinance.

M'GOVERN ASKS LEGAL RULE ON PAY CUTS

toned Babcock about the firing of the 168 men and the salary cuts and Babcock had told him that it was done because the county did not have money to do otherwise.

"We have to cut 25 per cent, but the cost of living has gone down 25 per cent, too."

McGovern voiced no objection to the firing of Public Works Department men until one of them appeared before the Commissioners' clerk before noon and charged that discrimination had been shown in selecting those slated for discharge. He said in many cases married men have been discharged and single employes permitted to keep their jobs.

SPECULATE ON PAY

As a result of these charges the matter probably will be reopened when the commissioners take up the salary cuts again late this afternoon.

County employes, 2,000 of whom have received no pay since November 15 because McGovern's absence and the death of Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong prevented the controller's office obtaining the two signatures required for all checks, were wondering if the commissioners' dispute over legality of the salary cuts will tie up the salaries on which they expected to use for Christmas expenses.

KANE RESIGNS COLLEGE POST

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 17.—(AP.)—Dr. Flora Kent Kane, acquitted last week at Hampton, Va., of a charge of murdering his wife, returned to the University of Tennessee yesterday to resign as head of the department of romance languages and to defend himself against charges he is a menace to the institution.

ANATOLE CLUB TOYS REBUILT TO AID NEEDY BY TIGER CLUB

Fifty needy families from the North Side and North Borough will be provided with food and necessities for Christmas by the Anatole Club, it was announced today.

Members decided to place funds for the project at the disposal of a committee composed of mothers of members, of which Mrs. Charles F. Shade is chairman. Food and clothing are being gathered by the committee and they will be distributed by members of the club.

Thousands of broken and shopworn toys are being made into bright-painted gifts that on Christmas will make many South Side children happy. The toys are provided by Downtown and South Side merchants, and the work of repairing them is being done by 10 members of the Tiger Club of the South Side. The Lions Club of Mt. Lebanon is cooperating by providing toys.

Six weeks ago the Tiger Club boys started to collect the toys and set up a repair shop at the home of the club's president, Milton Howard, 26 South Fourteenth street. Through teachers of nine schools in one district, the club will distribute approximately 1,000 cards to children. These cards will be used by the children to obtain the toys Christmas eve at the South Thirteenth street Turner Hall.

2 BANDITS SHOT AFTER HOLDUP

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 17 (AP).—Two gunmen, one a Negro, were shot and wounded seriously by police who foiled an attempted holdup early today.

They had entered the apartment of Mrs. Gussie Wilner, where a card party was in progress, tied two men and were taking jewelry from the women when neighbors heard the commotion.

One of them telephoned police who arrived as the robbers tried to escape from a rear window. They were shot when they ignored an order to halt.

DEACON SLAYER FREED BY JURY

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Dec. 17 (AP).—Charles Zehab, 40, was acquitted last night of the murder of James E. Sandridge, deacon in the University Baptist Church.

Zehab dramatically told how he followed his wife, Victoria Zehab, and the 60-year-old deacon to a woods near the Farmington Country Club the morning of the tragedy.

Zehab's testimony coincided with that of his wife. She admitted screaming "Sandridge kill him!" when they encountered her husband on the roadside.

Dedicate Glenfield Fire House Tonight

Attorney Ralph H. Smith will be the principal speaker at dedication ceremonies of the new fire house in Glenfield tonight. The building was erected by volunteer firemen in spare time.

Other speakers will be Fred W. Schneider, president of the fire company, and H. H. McQuiston, vice president, who will preside. A dance will follow the ceremonies. The committee is composed of McQuiston, W. E. Gehres, W. M. Robinson, W. M. Brown and Harry Gangloff.

Escaped Lifer Slain In Fleeing Robbery

DALLAS, Tex., Dec. 17.—(AP).—A man believed by police to be Charley Stanley, escaped life term convict from the Oklahoma Penitentiary, was killed here last night in a gun fight with Policeman J. E. Griffin, who was seriously wounded.

Griffin engaged the man in a pistol duel shortly after he had robbed a filling station and was attempting to escape in an automobile.

Rabbi to Address Trade Board Meeting

Members of the Squirrel Hill Board of Trade will be addressed by Rabbi B. Benedict Glazer, assistant to Dr. Samuel H. Goldenson, of Rodef Shalom Temple, at the last meeting of the year in the Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church, Forbes street and Murray avenue, Monday night. Relief work carried on by the board will be discussed after the address.

Indianapolis Gets Church Convention

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 17 (AP).—The 1932 international convention of the Disciples of Christ will be held in Indianapolis October 11 to 16, it was announced after a meeting of the executive committee and national board members here.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

Unsung New Yorkers

IT MUST HAVE been fully 30 years ago that Charlie Green went to work for the city's largest gas company. He was a gasman's helper, whatever that might be, and it doesn't sound any too romantic. To the average young man who worked with Charlie, the job was merely being used as a filler in. Just something to tide one over until a real opportunity came along. To Charlie, however, it was different.

With this company, Charlie could see a very definite future for a hard working employe. He saw a fairly comfortable salary and a pension that would enable him to carry on without working. When a man looks at the future in such fashion, you may be sure there is a girl in the case. And there was.

As soon as Charlie's first advancement was handed him, he and the lady were married. They were ideally mated, for they both knew how to make every penny count. It was one of those happy unions that society never enjoys because it cannot quite understand. Whatever that might mean.

The fixing of gas meters and the installing of ranges doesn't seem very exciting to me, and I doubt if it does to you. This Charlie must have been an unusual bird because from all accounts he really enjoyed the work. When another employe was more than ready to call it a day, Charlie always found just one more thing to do. He would have made a terrible columnist.

When sufficient years had gone by, Charlie came into one of his rewards. He was made a member of the rescue squad by the gas company—and, by his reaction, you'd think he had been elected President of the United States. To him, this was just about the perfect existence. Here was a chance for chills and thrills, and good pay in the bargain.

When he and that devoted wife sat together at night, their discussions did not concern actresses or night or current movies. Instead, the story of Charlie's day was excitement enough for them. Perhaps it was an accident case. Or perhaps an attempted suicide that had been stopped in the nick of time.

Martha gave out a healthy "tch, tch, tch" and listened eagerly to the next case. All very simple for two such people. That pension now loomed larger than ever, and they lived secure in the knowledge that their old age would be a fairly comfortable one. Their savings and that pension would more than take care of them . . .

On an especially dangerous case one day Charlie rescued the victim and was rewarded with a medal for his heroism. You can imagine what that did to increase his happiness. A year later there was another medal, and soon there was a third. Before long he had quite a collection of them, and had become quite famous in his own circles. Once the publicity man for the gas company gathered some reporters to talk to Charlie—and the next day out came the stories and the pictures. Charlie was pretty close to heaven on that particular morning, I can tell you.

These were big days for this man. He was being used more as an instructor than anything else. The new employes were first turned over to him, and it was up to him to explain the various forms of gas and different methods of aid that are necessary in the business.

More than this, his company sent him frequently to other cities where he would explain his experiences to the employes of other companies. He and his medals were much in demand at gas banquets, and I don't mean the speaker's table.

One morning it dawned on Charlie that he wasn't growing any younger and that he was getting just a little tired of banquets and medals and gas. He spoke to his wife about the situation and she, of course, agreed with him. They had lived very economically all their lives, and there was more than enough for a little home in the country and a small car. Why not go to it?

"We're going to enjoy a bit of life while we still can," enthused Charlie. "You begin to look around for the place, and I'll speak to the boss about it as soon as possible. It's going to be great, Martha."

The boss, an energetic sort of guy, listened to Charlie's wishes and then nodded agreeably.

"Charlie," he cried, "you're welcome to anything we can give you. You've been just about the best worker we ever had, and we're not going to forget you. I'm going to take it up with the committee and, while I don't want to promise anything definite, I'm going to see if we can't retire you on full salary. As far as I'm concerned, you deserve it."

The employe attempted to stammer his thanks, but the boss stopped him.

"Never mind the thanks," he chirped. "It's we who should be thanking you. Just one favor I want to ask. About two months from today we're opening a new plant—and we want you present for the big day. You can show up with your medals, make a short speech to the employes—and announce your retirement at that time.

"I'd like it that way. Not only for your sake, but because the company will benefit and so will the employes. Good luck, Charlie."

Well, Charlie bought that little home and that little car without waiting any longer. I don't have to describe his state of happiness because you can well imagine it. Here, at last, was the answer to all his dreams. Here was the result of the struggle through the years. Here was the prize that justified the work. The small home—the little car—and the tiny garage.

The big day arrived, and Charlie slipped into the clothes with the medals for the last time. He and his wife were going to drive to the new plant, and Charlie would announce his retirement. Probably the boys had chipped in to hand him some surprises in addition to his pension. It was to be a great occasion for Charlie.

The man couldn't wait. He had long since finished dressing when his wife had hardly begun. He paced the floor nervously, and then smiled at her.

"I'm going back and get the car, Martha," he said. "You take your time. I just want something to do while you're dressing. It ain't like me to be nervous—but it's a pretty big day for us. I'll be outside, dear."

Martha was just as excited as her husband. She, too, wanted to hurry. And just as much as she hurried, just so much longer did it take her. It was an hour before she was through and was hurrying to the garage to get Charlie.

"This is a fine time to be busy on a car," she muttered. "Charlie should know better."

The outside door on the garage had snapped, locking Charlie inside. His wife opened the door to chide him for his carelessness. It wouldn't have helped at all.

There was Charlie on the floor among his medals. He was dead from monoxide gas . . .

2 CITY WORKERS PROMOTED

Promoted as an aftermath of the probe into the City Treasurer's office, two employes today were filling vacancies created by indictment of John M. McKibben, former delinquent tax collector, and the promotion of former Chief Clerk Richard W. Thompson to the post of City Treasurer.

Robert Torrance, cashier in the Treasurer's office, was promoted to fill Thompson's old post, vacant since Thompson was picked by the Mayor to succeed Roy D. Schooley, dismissed for alleged irregularities in office.

John Mawhinney was selected last night by Thompson to succeed McKibben. Mawhinney's new job pays a salary of $3,960 per year. He formerly received $2,289 as clerk.

This completed "Christmas Jingle" must be in the mail before midnight Friday, December 18, addressed to CHRISTMAS JINGLES, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa. Write No. 36 on the lower left-hand corner of your envelope. Names of winners will be published in the Sun-Telegraph one week from the day this incomplete "jingle" appears.

Hunter's Treat Praised By Last Line Writers

Readers of the Sun-Telegraph who sent in clever last lines to Christmas Jingle No. 35 printed in the Sun-Telegraph with the exception of employees of this newspaper and their families, are invited to the bountiful supply of food that forms the theme of Christmas Jingle contributions for this week. Just clever last lines. You can send in as many furnished to the needy as you like. You do not have to buy a Sun-Telegraph to enter. You may examine the Sun-Telegraph at any one of the unique twenty-four hour service offices of the Sun-Telegraph.

A popular hunter was Brett,
Because he had kindness to share.
When he came back from the hunt
With a bag bursting with game,
You're as fat as a frog, said his pet.

The five $1 prize winners in this jingle are as follows: Mrs. P. J. Barone, 122 Vermont alley, Mt. Lebanon; Miss Emma Simpson, 327 George street, Turtle Creek; Mrs. J. S. Williams, 1216 Macon avenue, Swissvale; Leslie C. Girts, 245 Ridge avenue, New Kensington; Mrs. Marie Schiffer, 7262 Campania street, Pittsburgh.

Try your hand on No. 36 appearing on this page today. The "last line" entered the best will win $5 and the next five $1 each. All readers of the Pittsburgh

Doctors Remove Pin From Child's Throat

NEW BRIGHTON, Pa., Dec. 17 —Thomas Lyon, 2-year-old son of Dr. and Mrs. H. J. H. Clark, underwent an operation at Beaver Valley Hospital to have an open safety pin removed from his throat. The child is reported recovering.

New Erie Officials Shuns Rum-Holding

ERIE, Pa., Dec. 17 —(AP)— Mortimer E. Graham, District Attorney-elect of Erie County, wants to be freed of the responsibility of caring for "wet goods" seized in raids.

Graham yesterday said that he would seek to place the contraband in the hands of the Sheriff when he takes office January 4. Under the law, Graham said, he needs only to hold sufficient liquor for evidence purposes.

Mistletoe Pickers Report Big Year

MUSKOGEE, Okla., Dec. 17 —(AP)— An old Christmas custom is proving a boon to Eastern Oklahoma farmers.

Farmers with agile sons who can climb elm trees to gather mistletoe are making $5 to $10 daily from sale of the Christmas flower. Nearly a ton a day is being purchased by one concern here for shipment to eastern and northern cities.

PROTESTS MADE ON RAIL RATES

Shippers' protests to the Interstate Commerce Commission's classification of commodities in revised tariff rates were heard yesterday by railroad traffic executives of the Eastern territory at the William Penn Hotel.

Three traffic organizations combined in hearing protests, the Central Freight Association, New England Freight Association and Trunk Line Association. They represented all railroads east of Chicago. R. N. Collier, of the Traffic Executive Association, representing traffic vice presidents, presided.

The freight group will consider the protests and present them to the commission for possible revision prior to new rates becoming effective early next month.

CHRISTMAS FIRE WARNING GIVEN

Precautions against Christmas tree and toy fires are urged in a warning issued today by J. W. Morgan, state fire marshal.

He advises against lighted candles on trees or use of paper or cotton ornaments. The trees should be removed after the holidays, as the dry branches make highly inflammable material. Celluloid moving picture films and toys operated by gasoline should be banned. Window candles should be electric, and a fire extinguisher or bucket of water should be near the Christmas tree for use in emergency.

Valse Triste ..... Sibelius

Mr. Lissfelt

The audience was much larger than heretofore, many having doubtless come to do honor to the soloist, Elsie Breese Mitchell, soprano. In addition to the usual group there were flute, clarinet, horns and tympani used in the last two numbers of the program. May we suggest the management plan a better stage lighting, for the sake of the audience's eyes. Piecemeal we are getting to hear through this ensemble the pretty music of Fidelis Zitterbart, a Pittsburgh composer who played a very important part in training our amateurs 30 years ago.

Whether the addition of the woodwinds is wise or not is questionable; first thing we know there will be another Pittsburgh orchestra struggling for existence. Perhaps the repertory of the string ensemble is limited, but now this little company should be giving more of the classics, for only through them can they attain the qualities which they are certainly seeking.

Elsie Breese Mitchell's singing is well known here from her church work and with Mr. Boyd's Choir. Her voice is a very high soprano, better adapted for songs than the Verdi air. She was well received, and gave as encore Gertrude Moore's "Spanish Love Song." Earl Truxell played accompaniments.

J. FRED LISSPELT.

Leader of Harlan Miners Talks Here

CHAMBER LISTS 10 CONVENTIONS

The Chamber of Commerce today announced a list of 10 conventions it had obtained for Pittsburgh, in addition to 50 already announced to take place here during 1932. Paul R. Byrnes, convention manager of the chamber, made the announcement.

The new conventions include the Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware section American College of Surgeons; Pittsburgh Exteddfod; commercial section Pennsylvania Electric Association; iron and steel division American Society of Mechanical Engineers conference, American Methodist Episcopal Zion Church; Women's Foreign Missionary Society, Methodist Episcopal Church; Odontological Society of Western Pennsylvania; National Association of Ice Industries; Ohio Valley province, Newman Clubs; German Beneficial Union.

SIX DAYS LEFT TO BUY SEALS

Final appeal to the public will be made over the radio this week in behalf of the sale of Christmas seals by the Tuberculosis League of Pittsburgh. Tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock the Rev. J. W. Claudy, executive secretary of the Pittsburgh Council of Churches, will speak from Station WJAS.

Only six more days remain in which to buy seals for Christmas use. An appeal is being made to residents of Pittsburgh to purchase the seals sent them by mail or to return the seals to league headquarters so that an estimate can be made on the number sold.

WESTINGHOUSE MEET CLOSING

Closing sessions of the general sales conference of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company at East Pittsburgh this week were to be held today.

Discussions throughout the week included sales policies, engineering developments, research progress and the 1932 market for electrical equipment.

Speakers were F. A. Merrick, president; J. M. Hipple, general works manager, and vice presidents S. M. Kintner, W. S. Rugg, Walter Cary and Harold Smith; W. B. Marshall, commercial vice president on the Pacific Coast; N. G. Symonds, of Chicago; C. E. Stephens, of New York, and C. E. Allen, commercial vice president in charge of merchandising.

137 Bullets Fail To Fell Deer—Straw-Filled

OIL CITY, Pa., Dec. 17.—The deer hunting season ended, the story of the "elusive deer of Hogue Hill" was told last night, brimful of detail.

Cars had stopped suddenly, hunters jumped out and took aim at the animal poised in the thicket. Bullets zipped to the mark, but had little effect. More shots—and the deer stood still.

Then inspection revealed that pranksters had stuffed a deerskin with straw and set it up as a target. The joke was so good no one told, until the season ended. Then the bullet holes were counted—137 of them.

'IGNORANT' VOTE BOARD FREED

Freedom was granted the members of the election board of the Eighth District of the Twenty-eighth Ward, when they offered to plead guilty to violation of the election laws before Judge James H. Gray, noted for his severity towards election offenders in Criminal Court.

The board comprised Lawrence Lyons, Charles Gugger, Miss Jean Kuper, Charles J. Kopp and Joseph G. Carr. Information had been made against them by J. C. Wiedmann, who alleged that Anna O. Brandon had been sworn in as minority inspector on the board at 2 a. m. the morning after the election, to take the place of Miss Kuper, who had gone home sick.

Judge Gray said:

"If you will enter a plea of no defense, I will adjudge you not guilty. Your seeking to replace a sick member of your board while you were counting the ballots, while irregular, shows ignorance rather than corruption, and no harm was done."

Americans to Fight Plague in Manchuria

BERKELEY, Cal., Dec. 17.—(AP.)—To prevent a pneumonic plague in the Manchuria fighting zone, an expedition from the Hooper Foundation of Medicine at the University of California will sail on the President Jackson from San Francisco today for China.

The expedition will be led by Dr. Arthur Torrance, medical explorer. Dr. Torrance and his four medical aids will establish headquarters in Mukden.

25,000 UNPAID; PHILADELPHIA BANKRUPT

City Workers Face Fundless Christmas as Bankers Refuse Cash on Bonds

By J. T. RAWLEY
International News Service

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 17.—The spirit of Christmas is abroad the land, yet for the families of 25,000 city employes of staid old Philadelphia there is no joy. Today is just another day to these men and women and a payless one at that. For Philadelphia's treasury is as bare as the cupboard of Mother Hubbard.

One payless pay day already has passed and another is nearing with only no money in sight. Already $1,625,000 is due these workers and before the dying year ends Philadelphia will be more than $3,000,000 in the red, at present appraisal. Even the efforts of Philadelphia's stern old man of finance, E. T. Stotesbury, have failed.

SHUNNED BY BANKERS

His suggestion that local bankers buy $3,500,000 of proffered city bonds and sell them back to the city's Sinking Fund Commission when the money is available the first of the new year was hailed as the solution of the city's current finances. The plan was received coldly on all sides as the answer to the pleadings of the workers for their pay. However, the scheme collapsed when bankers refused to accept the project. The latter already stumbling under millions of frozen assets and the burden of excessive taxes refused to carry the burden of the additional millions of doubtful city paper.

Although the bonds carry pledges of 4½ per cent interest they have proved unsalable for the most part. First offered at 4¼ per cent then at 4½ and finally at 4¾ per cent, only a comparative small amount of the $30,000,000 issue has been sold.

The only plan now seemingly left is the scheme first proposed and rejected and now proposed again to issue pay warrants to the employes for the amount due them with the city's promise to redeem them in cash at some future date. Again the bankers have turned thumbs down on this proposal and announced the script would not be accepted and cashed by the Philadelphia Clearing House and its members. A few of the city's large stores, however, are willing to receive the warrants at a percentage of their face value in payment for merchandise.

CHARGE PADDING

Approximately a week will pass before the work of printing, filling out and signing these warrants and then countersigning them as individual pay warrants can be completed. Possibly these unpaid workers will not receive their money until after Christmas.

Behind the tangled business and the suffering that it has brought about, many claim, is the padding of city payrolls with needless henchmen of political leaders. To raise the necessary sums going into the pockets of these political followers the tax rate was raised to $2.77½ per hundred, and only a week ago a 55½-cent increase, making the rate $3.13, and a 50 per cent water rate boost, was proposed for next year.

Shoe Squeaks Drive Husband to Divorce

CHICAGO, Dec. 17.—(AP.)—Squeak, squeak went Mrs. Helen Cechota's shoes and love cooled, she told Judge Lewis when she obtained a divorce from Edward Cechota. She said:

"He couldn't stand my squeaking shoes. It became a continual battle with the climax when he insisted I take off my shoes when we were out walking."

Erie Council Drops Pay Reduction Rule

ERIE, Pa., Dec. 17.—(AP.)—Heeding the protests of employes, City Council has rescinded its order of Tuesday reducing wages 5 per cent.

Police and firemen led the fight against the slash, modified from an original order of 10 per cent. A committee of workers appealed to Council and the "no salary cut" decision followed.

SANTA DINNER FOR 50 BOYS

Fifty needy boys will be entertained at a Santa Claus dinner Monday night in the Downtown Y. M. C. A. by three young men's groups from the downtown branch. The boys are from the Wilkersham School, South Side.

The hosts will be members of the Monitor College and Chi Rho Delta clubs. Following the dinner there will be an entertainment and the guests will receive gifts. Those in charge of the affair are George Townsend, John McNair, Robert Young, George Cobach and Edwin Rowlands.

CAROL SINGERS AT HOTELS

Downtown hotel lobbies will resound with carols Christmas Eve when a choir of 100 members of the County Christian Endeavor will offer 20-minute programs.

Four hotels will be visited. The program opens at 10 p. m. in the Fort Pitt Hotel. The choir will go to the Roosevelt Hotel for a 10:35 o'clock program, thence to William Penn Hotel at 11:10 and the closing program begins at 11:40 in The Pittsburgher. Clyde L. Wolford will direct.

1,000 Girl Scouts Will Sing Carols

More than 1,000 Girl Scouts of Allegheny County will take part in a Christmas carol service Sunday night in Trinity Cathedral, Sixth avenue. Every troop in the county will be represented. The address will be by the Very Rev. N. R. High Moor, dean of Trinity. A massing of all flags of the Allegheny County Girl Scout troops will mark the ceremony.

PITT STUDENTS IN YULE FETE

The traditional Christmas festival of the students of the University of Pittsburgh will be celebrated tonight in the ballroom of the Hotel Schenley with the appearance of Yul Bok, Sweden's Santa Claus, and the presentation of a pageant depicting the observance of Christmas in the home of a Swedish noble.

Included in the cast of the pageant, which is arranged by Gladys Schmitt, a senior student, are Marion Rae, Helen Cloos, Clarence Sober, Carl Morrison, Betty Quartie and Doris Custer. Members of the men's and women's glee clubs of the university will sing Christmas carols.

A dance will follow the performance. Clarence Smith, senior student, is chairman of the festival.

Royal Windsor All-Wool Velva-Sheen

Motor Robes

Actually Worth Three Times This Price!

4.95 Each

Because the American Woolen Mills discontinued the manufacture of this rich, deep-pile cloth, a nationally known maker bought up enough yardage to make these fine blanket robes—and paid a fraction of its real worth! Distinctive, practical and luxurious . . . from hem to hem they are their own recommendation of superlative quality.

The facts are these:

1. Four richly-toned color-combinations, robes are reversible.
2. Nap is integral with the fabric, will not wear threadbare.
3. Soft to the touch; will not chafe or scratch delicate fabrics.
4. Robes have a constant, clear sheen — a robe for the finest cars.
5. Richly dyed colors are fast—easily cleaned.
6. A many-purpose robe—and many uses will occur to you.

Coyne-for-Chairman Plan Loses Steam

By MARK SHIELDS

The proposal to make Senator James J. Coyne Republican county chairman has not the same steam today as on Monday, when W. L. Mellon first evinced activity on behalf of the Oakland leader. Both are said to have cooled toward the idea, though it is unquestioned that Coyne can get the post if he and Mellon are insistent.

Opposition to the plan is unable to coalesce on any candidate, and it is an axiom of politics that you can't beat some one with no one, no matter how much sentiment there may be against the "some one."

Sentiment developed here was not the ruling factor in giving the Senator and the former state chairman pause, it is reported. Advices from Washington are to the effect that the Republican National Committee has become interested in the matter and is perturbed at stories of what might happen in Allegheny County should Coyne become chairman. A. W. Mellon is reported to have been asked to use his influence with his nephew.

There is no fear in the national committee that Mr. Hoover will lose the nomination for President. That is assured, so long as he wants it.

But the national committee has heard that organization elements antagonistic to Coyne, independent elements at odds with Gov. Pinchot, and zealots who follow the Governor might get together in the fight for national delegates and send to Chicago next June an unruly crew. Certainly some of them would follow Mr. Pinchot, increasing his capacity for mischief, which the national committee already fears is great enough.

Mr. Pinchot cannot seriously challenge the nomination of Hoover, but in the convention he can raise a dust about power monopolies, prohibition, and many other things which the Republican leaders desire to have hushed, not only in their platform, but on the convention floor.

* * *

isturbance Here lay Aid Gov. Pinchot

If the election of Mr. Coyne ould cause disturbances here hich might redound to Mr. Pinhot's advantage through reisals by Coyne's foes, the Naional Committee feels it has a ake in the issue. It is not to be laced by the fact that Mr. Mellon is the chief backer of Senator oyne. Gov. Pinchot also has close lations with the Senator, as has oseph R. Grundy, no friend of r. Hoover.

Some opponents of Mr. Coyne re argue that the county chairanship would put him in the le. They assert that he could get o patronage, and that a chairan without patronage is doomed dislike. Their simile is that Mr. oyne would merely be given re rope with which to hang mself.

For some persons that might good logic. Applied to Mr. oyne it has no value. Too freently the rope with which Mr. oyne was to hang himself has en woven into a ladder with ich the Senator has climbed to more secure positions. Hasn't just landed the Sheriff's office m the blazoned leader of Inpendents in the state, just after ing his best to upset the plans that leader's enthusiastic folwers to get control of Allegheny unty? Senator Coyne is too rrad to be measured against e ordinary rules of politics.

The County Committee, which ould hold a meeting Saturday fill the chairmanship vacancy, obably will not meet until the st of the year. The committee les read that if the vice chairan does not call the meeting thin 30 days after a vacancy, e secretary shall call it not ore than 15 days thereafter. here has been no call for a meetg Saturday.

line's Declaration Stick Not Unexpected

Mayor Kline's declaration that der no conditions would he reign is not unexpected. If conicted on indictments now standg against him the Mayor will removed, otherwise he will rve the remaining two years of s term.

The Mayor is unable to see here as a private citizen he will in any more sympathy at his al than as a public official. here is as much drama to the al of a former Mayor as of a ayor, under the conditions. d District Attorney Park been illing to nolle prosse the case ainst the Mayor in return for signation, the decision of the ecutive might have been difrent.

That was the way the propoion was put up to Park, by more an one person, and by more an one public official, and it was tly rejected by the District Atrney. The Mayor has not yet d whether these proposals had s approval, merely observing at no friend was urging his resnation at this time.

It is fact that practically ry person who put the resigna-n bargain up to Park had a litical advantage to be served. d that goes for at least one otlighted gentleman whose name far has not appeared publicly the abortive negotiations. But long as the Mayor will not reh there is no advantage.

A mayor has influence, no matter how strong the fire under ich he fights. He has influce lost as a private citizen. ese are facts which have been cused by some of the real ends of the Mayor who do not h him to leave office.

The present furore of secret inclimanic conferences revolves out the future of the Mayor, her than any issue of whether e number of payrollers shall be uced.

Ambitious Newlyweds Begin Struggle for Success In Strange City

CHAPTER I.

Bill Lancaster drove a nail into the pastel-tinted wall of the new apartment, gave it an extra tap for good measure, hit his thumb, made a trenchant remark and sat down on the top of the kitchen step-ladder to nurse his wound and think things over.

Nevis, her slim throat and dark head emerging from the perky rosy ruffles of a sublimated bungalow apron, giggled and then sneezed. She was dusting books. Packing cases yawned, gaping, on the living-room floor. Bill said, severely: "Nice sympathetic girl, you are!"

It was a Joseph Pennell, a New York skyline, and had been given to them for a wedding gift some three months earlier.

Nevis, on tiptoe, presented him with the required wall decoration. She commented: "Isn't it lovely? Every time I look at it I get a big kick. To think that we once thought it would be about all we'd ever see of New York, except for theater trips once a year when we felt rich."

"Oh-huh," responded Bill, abstractedly. He slipped the picture wire over the nail. He asked: "How's that?"

Nevis stepped back and cocked her head. "A bit crooked. Straighten it, Bill . . . it has a sort of list to port." She added: "I can't help thinking it's desecration to drive nails. Perhaps we should have hung 'em all from the mouldings."

"This is easier."

Bill stepped down from the ladder and, an arm slipped about Nevis' slim shoulders, surveyed his work.

"Bill!"

"That's what your Aunt Carrie called it when she sent us the check to help with 'essentials,'" he reminded her. "Hey, wait a minute! Stand by!"

He released her and took two strides across the floor and set a record to whirring electrically in the new phonograph, the first that came to hand. "Golly," said Bill, "it's the Maine Stein Song and me but recently catapulted through the gates of dear old Yale." He stopped the disc and, hunting, discovered a plaintive tune to which, once it was revolving melodiously, he waltzed Nevis about the bare floor.

"Dancing with tears in my eyes," sang Bill in a clear baritone, "I am—like fun!"

The record ran to its close. Laughing, Nevis struggled to be free. "Bill, let me go. Do you realize it's 4 o'clock? And that crowd coming in for the house-warming . . . at 9?"

"Leave 'em come. We can put some of them to work." He flung her, and himself, on the stately overstuffed couch which Aunt Carrie's check had purchased. They sat there laughing weakly, for no good reason. Nevis laid her cheek against Bill's shoulder.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

MUKDEN, Japan, Dec. 17.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

America could hunt all over the world and not find a better fight to keep out of. There is only two things certain out here: The Manchurian problem won't be settled this year or next; the second certainty is any commission that tries it will wind up "in wrong" with both sides. We don't belong to the League. They are the ones that are refereeing it and we have yet to referee a fight successfully. But of course we will join 'em and get in wrong. It's too big an opportunity to lose.

ROBBERS CART AWAY SAFE

Robbers carried away an 800-pound safe containing about $40 and valuable papers from the office of the gasoline service station and garage of E. W. Bametzreider, 2350 Center avenue, early today, police were notified.

Entrance was gained by forcing open a rear door. Marks on the floor indicated the safe had been dragged to the front door. Police believe it was then lifted into a truck and carted away. The robbery was discovered when the place was opened this morning.

Three radios, cigarets valued at $50 and $50 in cash was the loot of thieves, who broke into a store at 737 South Aiken avenue, according to a report to police today by George H. Taylor, proprietor.

Dancer Fights Reduction Diet As Futile Fad

BOBBY GORMAN

Show Girl Brands Weight-Dodging Tactics Wrong

The belief that women should watch their diets to keep slender was branded false today by Bobby Gorman, dancer, who said she eats all the sweets she wants and suffers none of the hardships encountered by women who follow reduction diets.

Here for several weeks engagement at the Show Boat, where she appears as a member of the Allan and Gorman song and dance team, Miss Gorman maintained any food people like is not necessarily fattening, not even candy—if they do not eat any more than they really want. Said Miss Gorman:

"What I'm after, is to get back women's right to eat what they like and plenty of it. I'm out on the firing line swinging wallops at the reduction diet boloney. And I think I'm saving a lot of show girls at least from hardship, worry and ill health."

COUNCIL MAY CUT TAXES 3 MILLS TODAY

Compromise on 1932 Rate Looms; Budget Further Reduced in Night Session

Pittsburgh's 1932 tax millage on lands and buildings may be fixed today at Council's Budget Committee session. A concerted effort was to be made to reduce the rate at least three mills, suggested as a compromise between the legislative body and the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board.

For the first time in nearly three weeks, the budget committee yesterday and last night accomplished tangible results in appropriation slashes. The first evening session was held and another is likely for tonight, according to Chairman W. Y. English.

GAS LAMPS ARGUED

Over protests of Councilman Charles Anderson, the committee approved an appropriation of $84,124.50 for maintenance of 3,299 gas lamps in isolated areas.

A conference between city officials and representatives of the Duquesne Light Company was ordered in an effort to bring about a reduction in the city's lighting contract.

Public Works Director Lang was ordered to report to Council why, as charged by Council members, the insurance company that holds the liability policy on the Schenley golf course never pays accident costs. Several suits have been filed against the city by persons struck by golf balls hit by municipal course players.

Lang was also instructed to report on the feasibility of instituting a five-day or a six-day week for employes at the city's pumping stations.

MARKET FUND CUT OUT

Other highlights at last night's session included:

Elimination of a $12,472 appropriation for operation and maintainence of the South Side Market House, suggested by the Building Owners and Managers Association.

Transfer of automobile parking activities at the city wharves from the Department of Public Safety to the City Treasurer.

Laying of plans to lease the Diamond Market to its tenants on a 10-year lease basis.

Cuts in appropriations totaled more than $75,000.

Under terms of the proposed lease for Diamond Market merchants the tenants would pay the city $10,000 a year for the first five years, with the privilege of renewal at $20,000 per year for five more.

Itinerant Christmas tree and flower merchants who have operated in the Diamond Market vicinity will be frowned on by the police, Council has decided. The Public Works and Safety departments were informed Council will permit space to be used in front of the building only by tenants of the structure.

Slot Machines Run In Children's Reach Vanish After Expose

Devices Gone From Store Next Door to Police Station

School children who visited the confectionery store adjoining the Carrick Police Station today discovered that the two slot machines which have been tempting them had been removed.

The machines, placed within each reach of the children, disappeared along with two punchboards a few minutes after a police lieutenant dropped into the store shortly before the noon recess.

No one apparently was arrested. The machines were made more available to youngsters than the penny candy sticks. Instead of being placed on a counter, as is customary in speakeasies, where the machines are commonly found, one of the gambling devices stood on a low box on the store floor, so low a 5-year-old might touch its coin slot. The machines were of the five-cent and 25-cent varieties.

In the meantime, so far as could be learned, South Side police, under the direction of Inspector Dennis Hennessy, continued their "war" on penny punchboards and the penny machines of the type that require skill to win.

And at a late hour only two arrests had been made although scores of petty gambling devices of every type, as well as the quarter and nickel machines, were in evidence in South Hills district stores.

Police and city firemen are among the best customers of the store adjoining the Carrick police station. Scores of pupils from a nearby school were daily tempted by the machines whose familiar whirr and click could have been heard by the police and firemen customers.

Inspector Hennessy's current "drive" made after parents complained that corner store games of chance had been getting the pennies and nickels parents gave children for school lunch money, has not netted one of the real "big time" slot machines. Arrests were not made even when the relatively harmless penny machines with the "element of skill" feature were confiscated.

DR. CARL PIERRE ANDRE . . . WATCHING COURT PROCEEDINGS

By MILLER HOLLAND

International News Service.

RENO, Nev., Dec. 17.—A college co-ed, who admitted joining in the revels of the smart divorce set at the dude ranch of Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., today told a story of the party that preceded the death of a beautiful young widow.

Dr. Carl Pierre Andre, Fairmont (W. Va.) dentist, was on trial here, charged with responsibility for that death.

Pretty Miss Mary Ruth Seamon, a senior at the University of Nevada, testified to the "fatal cocktail party," following which, the state contended, Dr. Andre and Mrs. Martha Hutchinson, a 20-year-old Fairmont widow, went for a desert automobile ride from which the young woman returned with fatal injuries. The co-ed testified:

"There were 10 or 12 others there, including Mrs. Lawrence Tibbett. A round of drinks was being served. I refused mine. Mrs. Hutchinson barely tasted hers."

The entire group then went out doors, Miss Seamon went on. Dr. Andre appeared, the co-ed testified, and took Mrs. Hutchinson to his automobile for the ride that led to her death.

Mrs. Claire Stott, a dashing divorcee and said by the state to be the "other woman" in the case, testified that on the night Mrs. Hutchinson was killed the young widow was so intoxicated that twice she fell to the floor while dancing at Belle Livingston's.

PINCHOT ASKED TO AID PLAN OF JOHNSTOWN

Ex-Pugilist, Mayor Elect, Explains Program as 25 Boroughs Open Campaign

As a step in a campaign against utility rates Gov. Pinchot will be asked to suggest to the people of Pennsylvania lightless nights, it was learned today.

He will be asked by Eddie McCloskey, Mayor-elect of Johnstown, who revealed his intentions following a meeting of representatives of 25 boroughs who formed the Pennsylvania Fair Rate Association last night in Tarentum.

Said McCloskey today:

"I'll not only ask the people of Johnstown to have lightless nights when I take office next month, but I'll ask the governor to do the same thing all over the state. In Johnstown I'm going to turn out as many street lights as possible at 1 a. m. instead of letting them burn all night."

TO FORCE TERMS

McCloskey, former prizefighter, elected on a platform which included lower utility rates, declared his plan would force companies to come to terms.

McCloskey was a speaker at the Tarentum meeting, attended by borough representatives from the Allegheny, Ohio and Kiskiminetas valleys.

The preliminary details of the new association were left to an organization committee consisting of Burgess S. S. Baldridge, of Apollo; Burgess C. M. McLaughlin, of Freeport; John H. Rhodes, president of Wilkinsburg council; C. V. Tiers, of Oakmont, president of the Allegheny Valley Improvement Association, and Harry W. Wohlwind, of Greentree borough.

President A. B. Davidson, of Tarentum council, who presided, said another meeting would be held January 20. At this time decision will be made whether gas or telephone rates will be made the subject of the initial attack.

PINCHOT AIDE TALKS

John M. Walker, of Leechburg, assistant state attorney general attended the meeting as representative of Gov. Pinchot. Lauding their effort, he said:

"You must, of course, remember, that the utility companies are giant corporations, extending over many states, backed by brains and huge capital. You can win justice in this fight, but to do so you must have a powerful association, showing a united front at all times."

Walker said utility rates reached their peak in 1929 and have not come down since, although labor and materials generally have fallen about 33⅓ per cent.

Mr. Davidson said that Tarentum's municipally owned electric light plant earned 22 per cent last year on the investment, in face of the fact, it furnished power to a number of surrounding towns at reduced rates.

74 New Cases Put Under Quarantine

The following new quarantine cases were reported by the City Health Department today: Scarlet fever, 6; diphtheria, 3; measles, 25; whooping cough, 4; chickenpox, 10; mumps, 19, and pneumonia, 7.

Rivals Cheer As Republicans Kick Each Other

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

The situation is as thrilling as the moment when Uncle Tom met Eliza skipping across the cracked ice.

"Are the Democratic bloodhounds chasing you?" asked Uncle Tom Mills.

"No," said Eliza Stimson, "I'm rushing to defend the administration."

Have the bankers tossed us to the wolves, thrown us on the spears and barbecued us for a Roman holiday?

Or do they believe with Stephen Decatur that, their country right or wong, they will still collect commissions both ways?

TOO MANY MAGISTRATES TAXING COURTS, GRAY SAYS

JURIST URGES SQUIRES TO THIN RANKS

Costs of Minor Cases Held Useless Burden on County; Bill Collecting Scored

Judge James H. Gray declares there are too many squires and aldermen in the county, and that care must be exercised or the courts will be swamped with minor cases and costs piled up on the county.

He so told members of the Minor Judiciary Association at their regular meeting in William Penn Hotel yesterday noon.

MANY CASES OF ABUSE

Judge Gray said:

"We will have to do something about magistrates' courts. There are too many of them. You fellows will have to do it yourselves. You are politicians and you are in the position to do it.

"There are so many cases of abuse. Because there are too many justices and aldermen there is a tendency to manufacture business."

Following Judge Gray's talk, Justice of the Peace H. M. Davidson of Cumberland, chairman of the committee on unpaid costs, reported costs due aldermen and justices from defendants that could not be paid because the county's appropriation has been exhausted.

BILL COLLECTING SCORED

The practice of justices of the peace and aldermen operating as bill collectors was bitterly attacked by Alderman J. F. Kenny of the Eighth Ward. Kenny scored the practice during a discussion of an alderman's right to sell form contracts, which include near houses. He said:

"Let's do our duty and let the collection business alone. This business of selling seals is not ethical and does not seem right. If squires are to be appealed to, the action should be brought in the form of a suit. We are not elected to do collecting."

Kenny's comments were lost in a series of arguments as to whether the practice of selling collection forms is proper, and no action was taken on his remarks after the practice was referred to committee.

Fight Brings Raid On House on Hill

Hill District police early today raided the home of Samuel Roshale, 38, at 67 Fullerton street, and arrested Roshale. The police reported confiscating a quantity of moonshine. The raid followed a fight in the house, during which George Johnson, 31, a Negro, of 165 Fullerton street, was hit on the head with an iron bar.

FORMING NEW LAW FIRM!

Young Pittsburgh Lawyers Marrying Tonight

FRANK R. SACK — MISS BESSIE ANNA KANN

After the ceremony tonight conducted by Rabbi Samuel H. Goldenson at Rodef Shalom Temple, this will be the firm of Sack & Sack—and Mrs. Sack will be the specialist in desertion and non-support. They're both practicing attorneys in Pittsburgh now.

YOUNG LAWYERS WILL MARRY

Two young attorneys mates in high college and law schools will be married at 5:30 this evening.

Miss Bessie A. Kann, pretty blonde barrister who has been practicing since she was graduated from the University of Pittsburgh in June 1930 and Frank R. Sack, member of the class of the previous year, will be the principals.

The ceremony will take place in B'nai Israel Synagogue, Negley avenue and Rippey street. Rabbi Samuel H. Goldenson of Rodef Shalom Temple will marry them. A reception will follow at 9:30 p. m. in the bride's home.

Miss Kann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Kann of 5478 Black street, attended Peabody High School where in her junior year she met Sack, son of Mrs. Joseph B. Sack-lowsky of South Atlantic avenue.

They were friends in college at Pitt and later at law school.

They conducted separate offices as they entered the practice of law—and will continue to maintain their own offices.

BANK CLOSINGS BLAMED ON HYSTERIA

Hoover Conference Aide Tells of Action Here; Home Loans Considered

A. C. Robinson, president of the Peoples-Pittsburgh Trust Company, explained the origin and purpose of the National Credit Corporation at the Pitt Businessmen's luncheon meeting today in the auditorium of the Chamber of Commerce. He said:

"Fear, panic and hysteria on the part of the public resulted in excessive and unwarranted withdrawals from banks by their depositors, stripping the banks of their liquid assets and leaving them with assets, which, while intrinsically good, are not capable of being converted immediately into cash.

CREDIT ARRANGED

"A great number of perfectly solvent banks were closed as a result. In this emergency the National Credit Corporation was organized to make advances to solvent banks on their unliquid but good assets, to meet the demands of depositors."

Yesterday Robinson discussed the details of plans to organize federal home loan discount banks with an initial capitalization of $150,000,000 and a possible ultimate capitalization of $1,500,000,000 at a luncheon of the Bond Club of Pittsburgh at the William Penn Hotel.

BANKS TO AID

The capital of the 12 discount banks will be subscribed by banks, building and loan associations and insurance companies. To be members, these organizations must subscribe for stock to the extent of 1½ per cent of their home mortgage holdings.

These organizations can then borrow from the discount banks to the extent of 50 per cent of the value of straight mortgages and to 60 per cent of the value of mortgages being retired by serial payments.

GIFTS PREPARED FOR VETERANS IN HOSPITALS

600 Christmas Boxes Ready for Distribution; Women's Aide Backs Move

Six hundred Christmas boxes were prepared yesterday by women members of the Veterans' Hospital Committee and affiliated organizations for holiday distribution to all hospitals in Allegheny County, where veterans are hospitalized.

J. J. Madden, 80th Division; James J. Pirt, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Adjt. W. B. Fowle, Salvation Army, will be in charge of distribution to district hospitals Saturday; to the United States Marine Hospital, Tuesday, and to the Aspinwall Veterans' Hospital, Christmas Eve.

The Christmas boxes this year include 17 small presents, each carefully wrapped and be-ribboned. They include cigarets, matches, match-case, a chocolate bar, fruit drops, a box of candy, a tie, garters, a handerchief, socks, shaving cream, tooth paste, tooth brush, a notebook, playing cards, razor blades and wash cloth.

The work of decorating the U. S. Marine and Aspinwall government hospitals for the holidays will be started this week by women members of the Hospital Committee and delegates from nearly every veteran and civic association in Pittsburgh.

EIGHT INJURED IN TRAFFIC CRASHES

Careening Car Damages 4 Autos, Then Hits Pole; Victim Taken to Hospital

After crashing into four automobiles and a pole, Harry W. Peterson, 32, of 101 South Seventh street, Duquesne, was in McKeesport Hospital with a fractured skull today.

Driving in Fifth avenue, McKeesport, last night, Peterson's car, according to police, crashed into the machine of Mrs. S. C. McCauley, of 3317 Garbett street, McKeesport, slightly injuring Mrs. McCauley and her 10-year-old son; careened into the auto of Dominic Scorson, 121 Fifth avenue, injuring the driver; crashed the machine of Jerry Simpson, of Dravosburg, and damaged the machine of Alfred Hanke, 2908 Garbett street. Then the careening car was wrecked against a heavy iron pole.

Frances Ertel, 20, of 4553 Carroll street, was in St. Francis Hospital suffering from undetermined injuries incurred when she was struck by an automobile at Penn avenue and Main street, Lawrenceville, early today. Peter Fink of 54 Lawrence street, Millvale, was driver of the machine, police said.

Raymond Provost, 12, of 2 Sherman avenue, Washington, was cut on the nose by flying glass and Mrs. Mary Izemour, 45, of 305 Bergman avenue, suffered shock when automobiles in which they were riding collided at Washington road and Shady drive East, Mt. Lebanon, last night, according to police.

Mt. Lebanon Group To Present Play

The Dracomtra players of Mt. Lebanon Baptist Church will present Sawyer Goodman's play "Dust of the Road" Sunday evening in the church fellowship hall. No admission will be charged.

Krogers to Spend $1,500,000 Here Next Year to Gain By Renewed Prosperity

The future of Pittsburgh is so promising to one national business organization that it intends to open 100 stores here in 1932 with an investment of approximately $1,500,000, according to Alvin E. Dodd, vice president of the Kroger Grocery and Baking Company, who yesterday arrived in Pittsburgh on an inspection trip. Optimistic about future business conditions, he said:

"We have 5,000 stores throughout the country. Some have felt the depression—in some districts during the past few months we have had gains.

"Because we sell to poor and rich, we have a barometer of business conditions that reflects the conditions of the people.

"We believe Pittsburgh is due for a gradual recovery, and intend to open 100 stores within the next year. The average investment of a store would be about $15,000. We have spent more than $200,000 in Pittsburgh district in improving our present stores.

"We certainly are optimistic, and our plans indicate it. We note the stabilization of prices on many food commodities. Some have risen in price, although 75 per cent of the articles have dropped 50 per cent in two years. They have reached the bottom."

BANDITS ASKING CAKES HOLD UP STORE CLERK

$25 Taken From Till Of Bakery in Oakland; Motorist Beaten, Robbed

Police today were seeking two bandits with a taste for cakes who late yesterday held up and robbed Miss Jane Rocare, 20, a clerk in the bakery of John Wirth, 519 Semple street, Oakland. They escaped with $25 taken from the till.

The bandits, waiting outside until the proprietor left the store, walked in and asked Miss Rocare for some cakes. As she went to get them one of the men, threatening her with a gun, forced her into a rear room while the other intruder took the cash.

John Halowicz, 35, was struck on the head last night by one of two thugs who attacked him as he was putting his car in a garage in the rear of his home, 705 Carson street. The thieves escaped with $6 they had taken from Halowicz's pocket, according to a police report.

Halowicz was taken to the South Side Hospital, where a cut in his head was treated. He said one of the men struck him without warning, and that the other one threatened him with a gun.

TUBE, TUNNEL PURCHASE BY COUNTY HIT

Action Follows Debate in Duquesne Club; Earlier Vote Declared Irregular

Directors of the Pittsburgh Building Owners and Managers Association today voted to oppose the proposed purchase by the county of the Wabash bridge and tunnel.

Their opposition, however, was not necessarily permanent, for they explained that the objections stood only until all facts concerning the proposal and its complete cost are ascertained.

A. H. Clarke, president of the association, explained that the directors have no objection to a new traffic artery in the Triangle if such an artery is proved usable and is approved by the City and County Planning commissions.

The directors ruled as irregular a vote reported taken by the association's members in the Duquesne Club yesterday, when the deal was said to have been approved.

It was explained that many of the members had departed before the vote was taken and that some of those who voted were guests, not members.

The Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railroad has offered to deliver to the county the completed traffic tunnel and bridge for $4,200,000.

OBITUARY

Carey Funeral

Funeral services were held today for John M. Carey, 67, retired businessman, who died Monday in his home, 928 Pennsylvania avenue, Oakmont. Services were in St. Irenaeus' Catholic Church. Mr. Carey was born in Pittsburgh and graduated from Holy Ghost College, now Duquesne University, in 1884. When a young man he moved to Duquesne, and was employed for many years by the Carnegie Steel Company. In 1909 he moved to Oakmont and became chief engineer for the Bollinger-Andrews Construction Company, of Verona. Later he became president of the concern. He retired in 1925. Mr. Carey was a member of St. Irenaeus' Church, Knights of Columbus, the B. P. O. Elks and the Engineers Society of Western Pennsylvania. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Agnes Clara Bollinger Carey, a son, Edward, and a daughter, Miss Genevieve Carey, at home, and a sister, Mrs. Mary A. Butler, of Duquesne.

John Heisch

John Heisch, 78, of 1234 Franklin street, a former general building contractor, died yesterday in Presbyterian Hospital. Radio Editor

SHIFTING SANDS of politics very seriously threaten the continuance of Judge Ira E. Robinson as the Republican member of the Federal Radio Commission from the second zone and the threat of speculation of his successor has jolted Pittsburgh into the picture. While Senators David A. Reed and James J. Davis of Pennsylvania decline to comment on the situation there's a well founded report that the new commissioner may come from this city when Robinson's term expires on February 23. Robinson's vote favoring the RCA's retention of its wavelengths in the recent antitrust revocation proceedings has alienated much of his support and it is doubtful that President Herbert Hoover will reappoint him.

The candidate most mentioned for the job up to now was Col. Thad H. Brown, now general counsel of the Radio Commission, who like each of the commissioners draws a $10,000 salary.

Col. Brown placed Herbert Hoover in nomination in the 1928 primaries and is supposed to rank high in Republican councils.

Our ear to the ground department reports that in case Col. Brown gets the commission post a Pittsburgher will fill his shoes as general counsel. At any rate Pittsburgh is supposed to have federal representation either with one of its more famous radio men or an attorney of a well known downtown law firm.

Question a Day:

How much did Jan Garber receive for his part in the Lucky Strike Dance Hour? Are all the orchestras regardless of name paid the same? Mary Antoinette, Homestead Park.

Answer—Jan's orchestra was paid $282.80. Each of his 11 men received a check for $23.40, and Jan, as the leader, received $35.40. The balance of the money was paid for hiring another orchestra to take Jan's place for half an hour in Pirate Hall and other incidentals. This is the arrangement made by Lucky Strike with most of the orchestras being "picked up" on their Dance Hour. Of course the amount varies in different cities according to the union scale.

"The Shadow," mystery figure of Detective Story over CBS—may come to Pittsburgh. A McKees Rocks manufacturer, is known to be dickering with Columbia for a half-hour program a week to feature "The Shadow" in a series of mystery dramas with WJAS the key station. If the deal goes through it will cost the local company $5,000 a broadcast.

Rudolf Friml got something like $20,000 for an electrical transcription contract and Weber and Fields are sitting in the balcony waiting for a similar bid.

Noble Sissle, who has never permitted a string instrument in his orchestra, is to be interviewed over WJAS next Tuesday p. m. at 5:15.

CBS has lined up 22 orchestras for New Year's eve.

Ethel S. Overbrook—Characters in Rinso Talkie are not "Mary and Bob" but Elsie Hitz (Jane) and Ned Weaver (Ted Carter).

An enemy chief by the name of "Get-the-enemy's-gun" is to lead an attack on the American radio audience next Monday afternoon at 5:45 over CBS-WJAS. . . . the chewing gum magnate who sponsors "Myrt and Marge" is to pas the bill.

Falls Dead When Son Shows Rum To Sleuths

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 17.—(INS)—Homer Ingersoll, 58, invited police to search his home for liquor when they explained they had no search warrant. They were investigating complaints.

Just as the officers were leaving, Ingersoll's son opened a cellar door, disclosing bottles and a jug of whisky.

Dog Rescuer Fails, Baby Dies in Fire

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Dec. 17.—(AP)—A pet terrier tried to drag the tiny body of his mistress, Annabelle Smith, aged 15 months, from their burning home, but failed, and the child was burned to death.

THE LOUDSPEAKER :-: By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—It must be distressing to Sinclair Lewis between novels and spars with Theodore Dreiser to know that Main Street is still the backbone of American thought. He has only to listen to the radio to realize it.

It is the family in the "cute, little two-by-four, down by the sycamore tree" that the mahatmammas—and pappas, too—of the microphone have in mind when they summon the majority of their entertainers.

The sophistications of the city receive but little play on the radio. Though there is always evident on the air a desire to do right by the knells of Tin Pan Alley, the knells are written predominantly with the folks in mind rather than the bright young people, those not so bright or not so young—who talk glibly of Wall street's heebie-jeebies, crowd into the snooty speakeasies of the fifties, devour the gossip columns and call Hizzoner "Jimmy."

* * *

The same rule applies to the sketches, serious and comic, to the monologists, to the vocalists from the concert stage, to all the vast and endless horde wending its gold-strewn way to the microphones. The emphasis is almost all on the Lewis-defying charms of Main Street.

* * *

Ballads that have done service since Stephen Foster was a minstrel, plays that date back to kerosene footlight sentimental tunes that used to agitate America when it was more maudlin than it is today, jokes, somewhat refurbished, that echoed through the land when Hayes was having it out with Tilden, all are grist to the radio mills that Main Street may cup its ear and cupping it, find life sweet and satisfying.

* * *

The "Stars and Stripes Forever" remains the musical symbol of rural patriotism just as "Swanee River" remains the symbol of the persistent call of home.

You can't identify "Swanee River" with a pent house or a suite at the Waldorf any more than you can identify the bucolic presentations of Phillips Lord and George Frame Brown and Leonard Cox with the Ziegfeld Theater. And the most successful of the current hymns of Broadway are those which echo the familiar virtues of the village.

The broadcasters would be chumps not to know where their appeal really lies and give it the recognition it demands. They have yet a lot to learn from Barnum, but they are wise enough to keep everlastingly in mind the vast extent of the country which lies west of the Hudson River and to focus their attention upon it.

You want them FRESH - so do we!

"You needn't tell me —I know Camel is the fresh cigarette!"

IT takes more than an imitation of the Camel Humidor Pack to deliver you a cigarette that is genuinely fresh.

Packaging can keep fresh a cigarette that is fresh to start with; it cannot freshen cigarettes that are dried-out or factory-stale.

Heat can benefit good tobaccos, but heat can also damage them—that's why there could be no truly fresh cigarette except for scientifically developed methods of applying heat.

Reynolds is proud of having discovered and perfected methods for getting the benefits of heat treatments and still avoiding ever parching or toasting.

Test them any way you like, you'll find Camels truly fresh. They're made fresh—not parched or toasted—and then they're kept fresh in the Camel Humidor Pack.

Try a fresh cigarette, for pleasure's sake. Switch to Camels for just one day—then leave them—if you can.

YOUTHFUL NOTE EMPHASIZED IN LATEST SPORTS CLOTHES

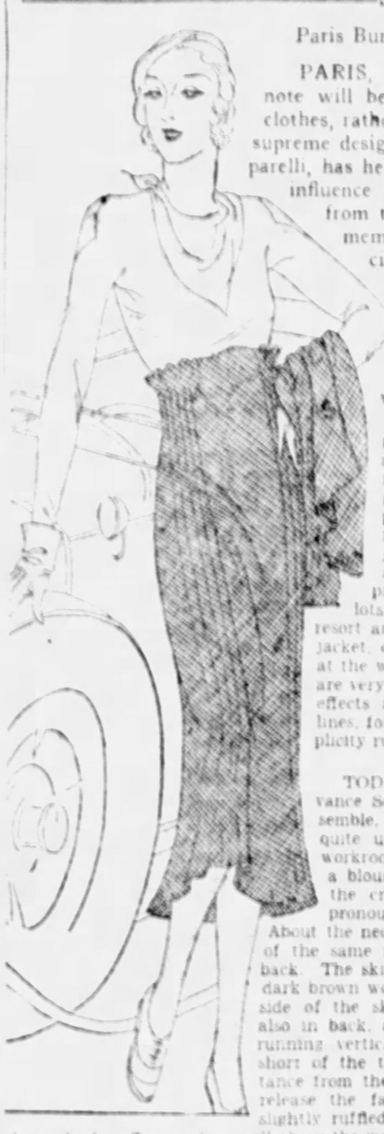
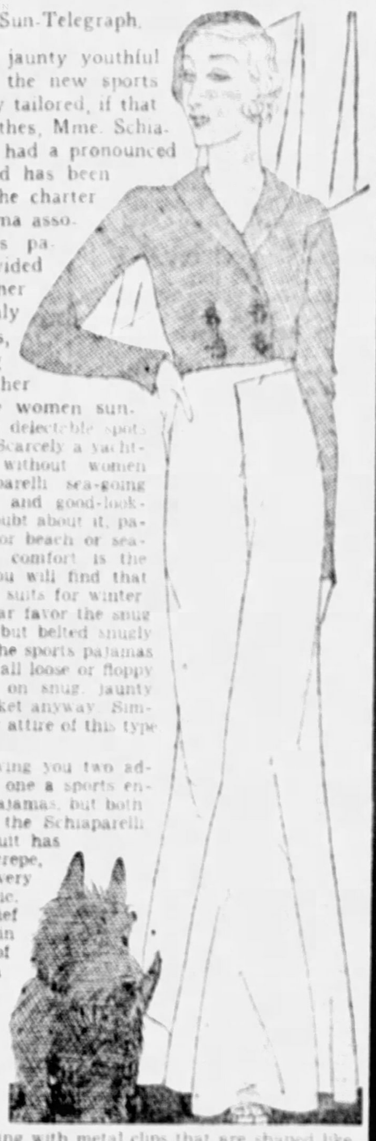
Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Dec. 17.—The jaunty youthful note will be emphasized in the new sports clothes, rather than the neatly tailored, if that supreme designer of sports clothes, Mme. Schiaparelli, has her way. She has had a pronounced influence on the mode and has been from the first one of the charter members of the pajama association. She uses pajamas and divided skirts for all her models not only sports things, but for evening wear. One sees her models worn by women sunning themselves in delectable spots along the Riviera. Scarcely a yachting party, too, without women garbed in Schiaparelli sea-going pajamas, practical and good-looking. There's no doubt about it, pajamas are grand for beach or seashore wear, when comfort is the prime requisite. You will find that lots of the new sports suits for winter resort and early spring wear favor the snug jacket, cut on Eton lines, but belted snugly at the waist or hipline. The sports pajamas are very smart, disdaining all loose or floppy effects and concentrating on snug, jaunty lines, for the bodice or jacket anyway. Simplicity rules as it should for attire of this type.





* * *

TODAY WE ARE showing you two advance Schiaparelli models, one a sports ensemble, the other sports pajamas, but both quite unmistakably from the Schiaparelli workrooms. The sports suit has a blouse of orange silk crepe, the crepe effect being very pronounced in the fabric. About the neck is worn a kerchief of the same material, knotted in back. The skirt and jacket are of dark brown wool jersey. At each side of the skirt, in front and also in back, are inverted tucks running vertically and stopping short of the top and some distance from the hem. Here they release the fabric in a pretty, slightly ruffled effect. The skirt has a high cuff extending well above the waistline. The jacket is a snug hip-length affair with a double-breasted front closing with metal clips that are shaped like dollar signs.

* * *

NOW FOR SOME Schiaparelli sports pajamas created for clients bound for the Southlands. The material for the pajamas is grey wool jersey, a new jersey with a distinct honeycomb weave. Over the pajamas is a jaunty little Eton coatee of dark brown jersey, double breasted and fastened with four metal clips that are nothing more or less than good old dollar signs. The pajamas have a suspender top like that of a Yankee farmer's overall and the whole affair is worn over a gaily colored, hand-knit bathing suit.

Lelia Earhart's Engagement Announced

Christmas Party Held By Fortnightly Review

Mrs. S. Y. Free of Lebanon avenue was hostess yesterday for the Fortnightly Review's Christmas party, a charmingly arranged affair for which Mrs. G. R. Lacy was chairman. Two groups of Christmas folk songs and traditional carols were sung by the president, Mrs. Don V. Sawhill, accompanied by Mrs. Don V. Hibbs McBeth. Mrs. Charles M. Bregz, of the Sun-Telegraph, addressed the club.

During the social hour, Mrs. J. V. Griffilan presided at the tea table which was artistically decorated with a center bowl of holly and red tapers. Two miniature trees, decorated with silver, stood on the buffet. Gifts were brought for the old people and children at the Baptist Home.

Aspinwall Woman's Club Play to Be Repeated

So much enjoyed was the play given last night by the evening and music departments of the Aspinwall Woman's Club that it will be repeated in the clubhouse tomorrow evening as a benefit. Mrs. J. B. Patterson, Mrs. J. E. Beachler and Miss Kate McKenzie assisted by Girl Scouts, produced the play, "Santa Claus' Joy Factory."

This afternoon at the regular club meeting the freshmen of the local high school are giving an adaptation of Dickens' "Christmas Carol" under the direction of Miss Gertrude Kromer. Miss Betty Beatty's rhythm band of young school children is furnishing the music and members of the Americanization class at the Aspinwall school are guests.

Club Notes

Don't Mistake Hurt Vanity For a Broken Heart

"You're all wet," sez he, "when you say 'don't keep on nursing your broken heart.'"

And then he goes on to tell us the sad, sad story of how a gal wrecked his dreams, 'n' busted up his life, leaving him just a sorrowful wreck who can never really love again.

"I have read your column for a long time, and most of the time you show good sense in your answers, but I certainly take exception to your remarks when you say, 'Don't nurse your broken heart forever,' etc.

"I was born in England some 30 years ago. I had to work hard and I studied hard, too, and when I was almost ready to enter a university in the north of England I was called to the war. All this time I had been writing to a girl cousin who had gone with her folks to America, and after I went into the war she became my anchor—or rather, I will say, the star to which I hitched my wagon. confided my dreams and told my troubles, until in time our letters became much more than cousinly.

"We dreamed together through those letters, built air castles together, and looked forward to the time the war would be done and I could come to America. Strange, is it not, the love one can have for a person not seen for years?

MET DISAPPOINTMENT

"Thus you can imagine me, a youth with ideals, having passed through the holocaust of war, unscathed bodily, but with a badly shaken morale; and at last coming to the glorious day when I set sail for America—and her. At last I was going to be with her! To speak our dreams out! To strive for her, fight for her, to be her knight in shining armor — dreams, dreams all. All dreams!

"Then the arrival at the home of my beloved. She was everything that I had dreamed—beautiful, gentle, charming, so evidently delighted that I had arrived; but—

"Oh, what a but! The revelation soon came that she was already engaged to another, and had been for six months before I left England!

"And that's why I say you are wrong when you say there is still a hope of romance. I feel my story must refute that statement. There has been another 'romance' since that one, but the blighting effect of the first blow still lingers, and nothing can obliterate it.

"JOHNNY."

VANITY DENTED

So you think that's a good and sufficient reason why yours should be a Blasted Life?

All right, go on and be Blasted if that's your idea of indoor sport, which it evidently is. But I'm still telling you you're wrong.

Your story doesn't prove that Romance is a flop; nor does it prove that your heart is permanently scarred, though I admit your vanity is nicely dented. It simply proves that you blew a bubble, and it busted.

You went in for an imaginary love affair. It wasn't based on fact or reason. It was the outgrowth of a moody boy's loneliness—a weak boy's desire to lean on someone. You weren't actually in love with a warm-blooded human girl; nor did you really desire marriage. You were in love with a vision, and you wanted that vision to come and play dreams with you.

And when she preferred life instead—why, you folded up!

And you call that a broken heart? Pooh! Stop hanging romantic funeral wreathes on yourself, Johnny. You're just having a lovely, slooshy time wallowing in the blues.

Snap out of it! Stop blubbering over your busted "ideals," and get a little horse sense instead. You could use it!

WIVES OF VERY SUCCESSFUL MEN MUST SOMETIMES LIVE SNOWY LIVES THAT BORE THEM TO DISPLAY HIS WEALTH
FAY KING

By FAY KING

Some girls are unhappy and discontented because their parents are not fashionable and more ambitious.

They imagine how much more life could hold for them if they had the background of a fine home and parents who entertained and traveled. They think of the brilliant marriage they might make and what a round of pleasure and finery life could be.

They do not seem to have noticed that the daughters of such parents are not always as happy as girls in humbler spheres of life think.

Some of the most brilliant marriages that have been managed by these matchmaking mothers have turned out the most unhappy.

It is in plain homes children are so dearly loved and not too much expected of them!

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Miss Arlen Shows Possessive Attitude Toward Noel

"Mary's upstairs. Shall I tell her you're here?"

I blessed Lillian's aplomb, and her elastic conscience. When Mary should make her entrance there would be no suspicion in the minds of our guests that she had changed her gown and done some especial "prinking" for them.

"Please!" Noel's tone was eager, but the girl standing so close to him that she gave the impression of being almost within his embrace, spoke quickly, yet with an effect of being sweetly languid.

"Isn't it too bad to bother her when we're only stopping for a minute?"

It was as adroit a performance as I had ever witnessed. Her tone, her words, her air, gave us all the impression, vague, but forceful, that Noel was her property. A mother, a sister, a wife, anyone of them might have spoken in just such a manner to one of her "men folk," in the ancient feminine prerogative of deciding social nuances—and would probably have been sulkily reproved for her temerity when she next found herself alone with the object of her care.

"Ah! my dear!" Lillian's tone was the condescending one which one woman in a thousand can use successfully, "you don't know Mrs. Graham's hospitality. Her maid is trained to scuttle to the kitchen at the sound of motor wheels. She even now is in process of preparing tea, coffee, fruit punch, or what else have you, and you will be brave people, indeed, if you escape before it is served. Phil, you old rascal, why don't you introduce me? And you haven't sent me even a picture postal card with a cross showing the location of your room! Yet you once swore eternal fidelity to me!"

In the depths of Philip Veritzen's fine eyes, there flamed a spark of—what?—resentment? —admiration?—memory?—I could not determine—it was gone the next instant, but not for the first time, I surmised that the brilliant producer, who had been a stanch friend of Lillian's for years, had once laid something more than friendship at her feet.

"If you will stop talking long enough to permit me to pronounce the names," he retorted, "I want you and Mrs. Arlen to know each other. And may I also present Miss Avis Arlen?"

Lillian put out her hand in friendly clasp to the elder woman and nodded a careless "How do you do?" to the younger one. The next instant she had managed to utter one word out of the corner of her mouth to me, inaudible to the others, an old trick of hers, learned during her years of work under my father in the diplomatic secret service.

"Marion!"

I acted upon the hint instantly, turning and speaking affectionately but imperatively:

"Marion, dear, bring the boys over here!"

She obeyed instantly, and I introduced them all, Hank and Bill bearing up bravely under the ordeal. Then I dismissed them autocratically.

"Take Miss Arlen over to the 'ballroom,'"—I laughingly pointed to the other side of the big living room where they had rolled up the rugs,—"It's a shame to inflict old people's chatter upon her."

Marion does not need a hint "spread on with a trowel," and besides, I was sure that she guessed the identity of Miss Arlen—she and Mary are not roommates without sharing girlish confidences,—and she put a possessive hand upon the newcomer's arm.

"We have some gorgeous new records," she babbled, "I suppose you've probably heard them, but I hope not. It's marvelous to hear something new and good for the first time."

"Yes, isn't it?" Miss Arlen agreed sweetly, then she threw a backward provocative glance at Noel.

"Aren't you coming with us?" she asked.

Noel is the soul of courtesy, and his answering smile at her was perfect. But his eyes were so unhappy that I interposed before he could either accept or refuse her invitation.

"He shall come over in just a few minutes," I told her, smiling with a warmth that I felt guiltily was a meretricious thing. "But I have a million questions to ask him first. Perhaps you know that I have the honor to be his librettist!"

I took Noel's arm and turned him away from the others, for Lillian was in her best form, and therefore fully capable of keeping Mrs. Arlen, Mr. Veritzen, and a half-dozen others, for that matter, royally entertained.

"Mrs. Underwood didn't tell Mary we were here, did she?" he asked anxiously.

"Not yet, but I'll attend to it at once. Just wait here a second."

I steered him into an angle of the wall screened from the observation of the young people at the other end of the room. Then walking a few steps away, I called softly:

"Hank, will you come here a minute, please?"

Household Hints

One housewife puts a small pan of vinegar on the back of her stove when she is cooking some of the more "smelly" vegetables. It prevents the odor from going all through the house.

Be certain that the hardwood floors are perfectly clean before either waxing or shellacking them. If all stains are not removed they will show up very plainly under the polished surface.

Dry chewing gum, often carried indoors on the soles of shoes, is easily removed from carpets and rugs by putting on a few drops of gasoline. The gum will crumble and can be brushed off.

How to Keep Well -:-

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Right Food Is Essential to Healthy, Happy Babies

When a baby is taken away from the mother's breast, it is necessary that it be given a proper formula. The formula may not be successful at first and then must be changed. This can only be done under the advice and supervision of a physician.

Dr. Copeland

It is important that the formula be varied from time to time as the child grows older. The customary change is to increase the amount of milk used and to decrease the amount of water. Whatever nutritive element is added to the milk is likely also to be increased gradually.

Many physicians now recommend that infants be placed upon cereals and other solid foods as soon as possible. It is amazing to see an infant take nourishment from a spoon at as early an age as two months. Not only do they seem to enjoy this novel experience but they put on weight and seem to develop rapidly.

The child requires attention if it does not take its nourishment well, leaves most of its bottle, or if it cries and frets a lot. Its stools must be watched carefully. If they are green and loose the doctor's attention should be called to the fact and his advice obtained.

When a child is not well and is not taking the proper nourishment the muscles become flabby. The usual bright smile that most infants have disappears. Appetite is poor and it is restless at night. It cries, is irritable and doesn't sleep at all during the day.

Infants require abundant food, yet this cannot be given in bulk. It must be carefully measured and gradually increased in quantity. If an infant were able to talk it would tell just what it likes and what it dislikes. Since it cannot do that, it must be given simple food that is easily digested. Proper food is essential to building up the tone and strength of the body.

All infants should be given regularly some form of cod liver oil, beginning soon after birth. This may be given in its usual form, or perhaps more advantageously in one of the new simple forms.

To help your infant develop into a healthy and happy child is not a difficult matter. It is essential to talk with your physician or have him visit the baby. If this is impossible because of your limited means, you may go to a baby clinic. There changes in food will be advised and instructions of general value will be given.

Answers to Health Queries

A. M. Q.—I am troubled with ingrown hairs about the face and chin. What can be done for this disturbance?

A.—Be sure to shave with the grain of the skin, never against it, also be sure to keep the face well soaped and moist while shaving.

* * *

MRS. M. H. Q.—I have a roaring and a hissing in my head and my doctor has said that the trouble is due to hypertension. My blood pressure is normal, but the noises persist. What would you advise?

A.—High blood pressure, nervousness or a catarrhal condition may be causing the trouble. If you are certain that your blood pressure is not at fault have your nose and throat examined.

* * *

MR. M. G. A. Q.—What causes foul breath?

A.—This may be due to diseased tonsils, decayed teeth, nasal catarrh, indigestion or constipation.

* * *

S. P. R. Q.—What will produce energy? Will an acid condition of the system cause lack of energy? Would it be best to see a doctor in this case?

A.—Lack of energy is usually due to some underlying cause. An acid condition would naturally affect the system in general. Proper diet and regular elimination should do much toward general improvement.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The Engagement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you assume your role of arbitrator and help solve the following argument?

The dispute involves the question of how the two families should become acquainted when a young man and woman decide to become engaged. A says that the young man takes the young lady to his parents to introduce her. After both families have been advised of the intentions of the couple, the young man's parents call on the parents of the young girl.

B says that as soon as the couple declare their intentions, each to his or her family, the man's parents call on the girl's parents and meet the whole family at the same time.

Who is right, A or B, or is there a still different procedure to follow? E. T.

The thing to remember is that, when an engagement has been determined on, the first move socially is on the part of the young man's parents. As soon as they can . . . correctly within the 24 hours after they have been told by their son of his engagement . . . they go to the home of the young lady and tell her of their welcome of her into the family. Then, if circumstances permit, they invite her and her mother and father to dine with them, formally or informally.

If they live at a distance, they write to the young lady, and again if circumstances permit, invite her to visit them in their home.

In due time, if they can, the young lady's parents plan to return this hospitality.

Signing Christmas Cards

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Kindly let me know the proper form for signing one's name to Christmas cards to close friends? Should it be John and Mary Brown, or Mary and John Brown? D. M. P.

Usually, even if Mary Brown signs these cards, her name comes first . . . Mary and John Brown. But if Mary feels that it is better to sign John's name first, she will not be criticized for this.

OFFICIAL SYSTEM As Adopted by Leading Authorities

By E. V. SHEPARD

The Solution of Monday's Problem

Z is playing the following hand at 4-Spades: The opening lead is the queen of diamonds; can he go game against any subsequent defense?

Evidently the declarer can win seven spade tricks, also one trick each in hearts and clubs—nine tricks total—but in some way he must pick up one more trick, either in hearts or diamonds; he cannot win an added trick in clubs.

Cover the queen of diamonds with the king; B must put up his ace or your one extra trick will be won on the first lead; trump B's ace. Lead six rounds of trumps; on the last three rounds discard from dummy two low clubs and the lowest diamond. Never mind what B discards; he never can gain entry. A must make discards while the six spades are led. The holdings of Y and Z will be as shown below.

Y
♠A 7 4 ♣A ♦10 8
Z
♥Q 10 5 ♣J 8 5

Probably A will hold the six following cards:

♥K J 8 ♣7 ♦J 9

If the above is true you may put dummy in the lead with a club; Y can give A two diamond tricks by leading that suit; this will oblige A to lead back hearts and Y-Z must then win two tricks in that suit.

In case A lets go one heart on the last spade lead, retaining either of the following holdings:

♥K J ♠7 6 ♦J 9
♥K J ♠7 ♦J 9 6
♥K J ♦J 9 6 4

You give A one heart trick by putting up Y's ace on the first lead of that suit, then throw A in with a second lead of hearts. With the first two holdings A will be able to lead a club; with the last holding all A can do is take his top diamond, giving the declarer five-odds instead of four-odds. No matter how A discards you always will find that an extra trick can be won by putting him in the lead with a heart or a diamond.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Rhythmic dancing is not only an effective means of shaking fat cells from hips, tummy and thighs, but it makes for gracefulness and poise.

Rouge is cruel to a faded complexion; it shows up evidences of age. The older woman should use cheek tints of faint rose shades and apply them with discretion. The lipstick is kinder to her; she can indulge in that more freely than in cheek batik or dark pencilings along the lines of the eyelashes.

Cosmetics are nice to play with. They smell sweet. They are alluring, leading us to believe that we'll be beauties if we stick to 'em long enough. Life would be dull without them. But they aren't much good in treatment of pimples, which are infections like boils, and which call for medicated applications. Hot water is good for them, or good for the purpose of getting rid of them. So is soap, put on with a thick rich lather. Hot compresses help clear the skin of pustules. After the soapy scrubbing, and warm rinsing, apply ointment of zinc oxide.

How would you like to lose 24 pounds of it in a month and at the same time increase your energy and improve your health?

How would you like to lose a pad of unhealthy fat that you don't need and don't want and at the same time feel better than you have for years?

How would you like to lose your double chin and your too prominent abdomen and at the same time make yourself so attractive that you'll compel admiration?

Get on the scales to-day and see how much you weigh—then get an 85 cent bottle of Kruschen Salts, which will last you for 4 weeks. Take one-half teaspoonful in a glass of hot water every morning—cut out pastry and salty meats—go light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar—and when you have finished the contents of this first bottle weigh yourself again.

Now you can laugh at the people who pay hundreds of dollars to lose a few pounds of fat—now you will know the safe and pleasant way to lose unsightly fat and you'll also know that the 6 salts of Kruschen helping nature to function properly, have presented you with glorious health.

Leading druggists America over sell Kruschen Salts. Buy one bottle with the distinct understanding that you will be joyfully satisfied or money back.

Mrs. C. L., of Shepardsville, Kentucky, writes: "I have reduced 24 pounds in 31 days with Kruschen and I ate three meals a day."

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Rome had to wait many centuries before Edward Gibbon, after looking over the wreckage of the Forum, decided to write the "History of the Rise and Fall." The moving pictures are less than 30 years old, but already Benjamin B. Hampton has written a goodly volume, "A History of the Movies" (published by Covici Friede), which tells the story of the most astonishing development in the amusement world since the last gladiator bit the dust.

Hampton tells about the zoopraxascope exhibited by Muybridge at the Chicago World's Fair in 1893. This reminiscence with its unpronounceable name seems to have been an outgrowth of the old zoetrope a toy familiar to children two or three generations ago.

George Seibel

But it was the development of the camera by Eastman and the development of the phonograph by Edison which finally resulted in moving pictures. The first movies lasted less than a minute, the subjects being simple things like a man sneezing, a horse eating hay, or baby taking a bath. These were considered little short of miracles. When in 1896 the Edison Vitascope gave its first public performance in Koster and Bial's Music Hall the adjectives "tremendous," "sensational," "enormous," were at once applied to the new amusement.

Press agents of the pictures have tried their best since then to find stronger adjectives and are still at it.

The real father of the movies as an amusement enterprise was James Stuart Blackton, a painter who used to give "chalktalks" and became acquainted with a magician named Albert Edward Smith. They paid Edison $800 for an outfit of projector and films and gave living-picture exhibitions in theaters and halls. They first photographed street parades, news incidents, prize fights, etc.

IT TURNS TO DRAMA

Shortly afterward a young newspaperman, Roy McCardell, began to use the moving picture as a story-telling medium. He was followed in 1903 by Edwin S. Porter, who assembled a cast of players, borrowed a railroad train in New Jersey and produced "The Great Train Robbery," a melodrama 740 feet in length.

William Selig of Chicago next started in to exploit the Wild West, bringing cowboys and Indians upon the screen—engaging an Oklahoma ranch foreman, Tom Mix, to act in one-reel westerns. Selig also brought lions, tigers, bears and wolves upon the screen.

Curiously enough, the Passion Play of Oberammergau was the first ambitious effort of the American movies. Among other early efforts were locomotive race trips to the moon and such gems as "A Race for a Kiss" and "Avenging a Crime or Burned at the Stake." Soon, however, the films "had to convey a wholesome moral lesson," which meant in effect that they were to be on the veracious level of Louisa Alcott and the Brothers Grimm.

When the closeup came into use, the pictures offered a new opportunity to act—a permitting the perishable value of the expression to be perpetuated. Sarah Bernhardt pre[illegible] Adrienne at the age of 60. Eleanora Duse thrilled audiences with some of her successful roles. By 1909 there were half a dozen film and producing corporations in America.

THE RISE OF THE STARS

The next development of the picture game was the rise of the stars. Some attained fame very fleeting, more wide spread than any dramatic stars as long as it lasted. Most of them flickered out when their first pictures ceased to flicker. Only a few, like Mary Pickford and Tom Mix, survived their little day of light and shadow. Even John Bunny is almost forgotten and Theda Bara, once considered as dangerous a woman as Cleopatra could not lure anybody to walk across the street today to see her.

The [illegible] developed a school of [illegible] which [illegible] the [illegible] films learned to talk, [illegible] the [illegible] mate stage found [illegible] "the easiest way" to make a lot of money. Since then nearly every actor who has achieved fame has found his way to Hollywood sooner or later, for a briefer or more protracted stay. Salaries paid to stars mounted up to $7,000 a week, and the investments in the industry, or art, rose to the billions. The modern moving picture palace became the third contribution of America to the architecture of the world—which it had already enriched by the skyscraper and the gasoline station.

Today everybody goes to the pictures and everything gets into the pictures. Comedians like Charlie Chaplin have amassed millions, really fine actors like John Barrymore have forsaken the stage entirely, singers like Lawrence Tibbett quit opera for theme songs, and the publicity men have ransacked all the dictionaries for more glorious adjectives. No one knows where it will end. In 1928, the big paying year of the industry, the total commerce of the American film companies has been estimated at over two billion dollars. The depression has depressed the films like nearly everything else, yet there are as many pictures produced as ever before, on a larger scale than ever before.

The printing press worked no such revolution in the life of its century as the movies have worked in our century. Combined with radio they transformed the entire amusement situation and profoundly affected the field of education. When television becomes a practicable reality, there will be another revolution. Meantime Benjamin B. Hampton's "History of the Movies" is an astounding story covering every avenue and aspect of this stepchild of the drama.

Indian Dances Feature Denishawn Program

The American Indian dances and the sax Boston Fancy 1834 will be featured by Ted Shawn and the Denishawn Dancers on their 1932 program to be given for one performance in Syria Mosque Saturday evening. Four American sketches also will be danced by Ted Shawn to a fiddler's breakdown, a Negro spiritual revival hymn and a patriotic song. In addition to featuring the American themes, the program will include music and dances of Russia, Germany, Italy and Spanish and Bavarian themes arranged for specific dances.

'House of Glass' Next For Ann Harding

The first RKO-Pathe picture to be produced at the RKO studios in Hollywood will be "The House of Glass," a screen version of Max Marcin's stage success. Ann Harding will have the starring role.

Miss Harding is now in Sarasota, Fla., with Director Tay Garnett, and the production unit filming "Prestige." Approximately another week will be spent on this location taking scenes for this picture and immediately following the star's return to Hollywood she will begin work on "The House of Glass."

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

When Leslie Howard appears in the Nixon the week of December 28 in Philip Barry's new play "The Animal Kingdom" there will be three matinees Wednesday, New Year's Day and Saturday. This will be the first performance on any stage and New Year's eve and New Year's night shows will be at regular prices for the week. Howard is associated with Gilbert Miller in the production of the new work. The box office will box next Monday.

Small Timer says some people act foolish with such enthusiasm one would suspect they were doing it in defiance of some constitutional amendment or other.

Frederick Worlock, who will be seen in support of Mary Roland in "The Vinegar Tree" in the Alvin, made his American debut in "The Wheel Of Life" in support of Elsie Ferguson, to whom he was married later. He was last seen here in support of Grace George in "She Had To Know." As a British officer in the World War he was so injured as to lose the use of his right arm. For heroism in the Battle of Arras he was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal. Tickets will be selling Monday for "The Vinegar Tree," which will open Christmas night and stick for the following week.

Weber and Fields, who split years ago and were reunited by radio, will try vaudeville again.

Anna May Wong, the Chinese gal of the films who fleshed it in "On The Spot," is rehearsing a song-and-dance act for vaude.

Doug Fairbanks has changed his mind about an Asiatic travelog and has cabled from Europe that he'll be back in Hollywood by Christmas.

Scribe Believes Year Brought Some Fine Talk Screen Entertainment

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 17.

Some 1931 screen moments I shan't forget are:

In "Outward Bound," when Leslie Howard first realized he and his fellow pasesngers were souls of the dead, sailing on a phantom ship; in "Trader Horn," when the native Oomoola hurled the spear into the brain of the leaping lion; in the same picture, the gruesome chanting of the natives as Harry Carey and Duncan Renaldo were awaiting death in the hut; that gay scene in The Royal Family of Broadway when Fredric March interviewed his whole tribe while taking a shower bath; the sinister menace of Edward G. Robinson in "Little Ceasar" when he spat the famous line "You can dish it out, but you can't take it!"

Leslie Howard

Nor can I forget the pathos of the moment in "City Lights" when the girl who had been blind came to realize the ragged tramp was her benefactor. Or, in "Cimarron," the quick grip at the heart when Richard Dix tenderly gathered the dying Negro boy in his arms and carried him on that solemn journey to his home. Or that scene at the end, when Sabra held the crushed body of Yancey to her heart and he whispered: "Wife and mother, stainless woman, hide me, hide me in your love."

For thrill, there was the moment in "Dirigible" when the great ship of the air broke up in the storm. And who didn't exult when Chic Sale delivered that kick to the gangster in "The Star Witness?" I'm thinking, too, of that very fun fight in the runways of the ship's engine room in "Transatlantic." Also, of the heart-rending scene in "Bad Girl" when James Dunn made his plea to the doctor. And of the superb climax to "A Free Soul," when Lionel Barrymore tore out the innermost secrets of his heart and laid them bare for judgment.

As I write, they come crowding on, scene after scene. Each is touched with greatness. It has been fine, after all, this year.

GOSSIP OR WORSE

How does Dorothy Lee do it? She now has Marshall Duffield and Tom Waring playing badminton together. . . . You're right. That feminine figure in the group statue before the Venice (Cal.) High School has a familiar look. Myrna Loy posed for it in her student days. . . . Irene Dunne's whole family, husband, brother, etc., are coming out here for Christmas. . . . Edna May Oliver writes she is spending her time in New York hearing concerts and grand opera. . . . Today, I learned there is a "Lupe's Tamale Factory" on San Fernando boulevard. . . . Something possessed Tay Garnett to send Patsy Ruth Miller an alligator named Hubert. . . . Charlotte Greenwood collects books on dancing. . . . And 200 people gathered to see Jackie Cooper impress his footprint in a block of fresh cement at Grauman's Chinese Theater.

HE'S OMNIPRESENT

Four years ago, when Jimmy Durante was playing eastern vaudeville, he hired a newspaper boy to yell, "Extra! Jimmy Durante's in town!" every time he came up to the stage door. The other night, Jimmy's car was stalled in traffic. He saw the sharp face of a new boy peering into the car. Suddenly the youngster screamed: "Extra! Jimmy Durante's in town!" You've already guessed it. The kid was the same newsie.

Notes About Coming Films

Two Pittsburgh boys, Eddie Quillan and Ralf Harolde, have roles in "The Tip-Off," comedy-drama, opening on the Fulton screen today. Although Quillan was born in Philadelphia he lived on the North Side for many years and was a member of the vaudeville act of the Quillan family before going to Hollywood. Harolde, born here, began his stage career in Pittsburgh 15 years ago.

Juliette Compton, a Georgia girl who, like her sister, Tallulah Bankhead, went to London and made good theatrically and then came back to the United States for important work in pictures, has a major role in "Husband's Holiday," arriving tomorrow in the Penn. She is seen as the business girl who becomes the sweetheart of Clive Brook, the featured player. Others in the cast are Charlie Ruggles, Vivienne Osborne and Harry Bannister.

JACKIE COOPER RETURNS

Jackie Cooper and Robert Coogan, who teamed together in "Skippy," are co-starred again in "Sooky," by Percy Crosby, which opens tomorrow in the Stanley.

Warner Baxter and Leila Hyams have the leading parts in "Surrender," romantic film coming Saturday to the Warner.

There will be a special preview in the Warner at 8 o'clock Sunday night of "Strictly Dishonorable," which co-stars Lewis Stone, Paul Lukas and Sidney Fox. The talking picture is an adaptation of the Preston Sturges stage play. Among those in the audience will be city and state officials, newspapermen, lawyers and doctors.

"Frankenstein," which closes its engagement in the Stanley tonight, will open tomorrow in the Davis. Boris Karloff and Colvin Clive head the cast.

The Enright beginning Saturday will offer "Blonde Crazy," co-featuring Joan Blondell and James Cagney. "Local Boy Makes Good," starring Joe E. Brown, will open in the same theater next Wednesday.

Dolores Costello has her first picture role in several years in "Expensive Women," coming to the Harris Saturday. H. B. Warner and Warren William also are in the picture.

OTHER BOOKINGS

Benny Moore, Italian character comedian, will bring his "Novelties of 1932" to the Academy Sunday midnight. There will be a special midnight performance of this Columbia burlesque on Christmas Eve, with "Nadja," the mystery girl, remaining as a special feature.

"Zwei Welten" ("Two Worlds") is the German film which will be seen in the Avenue Cinema next week, opening Monday. It tells of a nobleman's romance with a peasant girl.

To Kathleen Lamb

Kathleen, you've made me feel like thirty cents,
Your lovely sonnet touched me to the core;
I realize that I've been very dense—
And I am through with roving, evermore.
We men are frail—a pair of limpid eyes
And we are off to conquest or defeat,
It's really time that someone put us wise
That rapture comes to those who are discreet.

It's nice of you to think that if I go
And kneel before the object of my dreams,
Her tears will dry—her color rise and glow—
But though I hate to wreck your kindly schemes—

You're wrong—my lady does not give a damb—

—Don Wahn.

The Squelch Swelegant

It was jotted down here a column or so ago that the full line of that renowned showfolk squelch ran this way:

"I hope all your children become acrobats and never give you a tumble!"

We are inclined, however, to Mr. Mel Feltman of the Baltimore Sun for reminding us that it goes this way:

"I hope all your children become acrobats—so that they will have to be last on vaudeville programs and people will walk out on them!"

O, Mr. Wilstach!

[illegible] for the Dictionary of Bad Similes: Leroy Pilfen: Uncertain as the avowed love vow of a 16-year-old girl. W. F. C.: Inspired as a man trying to write her a decently long letter after the spark has flickered out. . . . Bugs Baer: Dangerous as an army mule that kicks when it is mad and bites when it is happy. . . . Anon: He slowed down like a motorist who sees a traffic cop. . . . Life: Slow as a newsboy giving change through a street car window. . . . Benjamin de Casseres: No more meaning to me than the word beauty to a Communist. . . . David Murray: Handy as a songwriter's memory. . . . H. Phillips: As indefinite as the words "I'll let you know" to an applicant for a job. . . . Pathfinder: Thick as good-fellows on the road to the poorhouse.

And They Hang Mistletoe!

The chap stood beside the railing watching the wake until the ship was beyond sight of land.

He looked around—nothing but water on all sides.

He walked unevenly down the deck, hunting for the Captain.

"I say, there, Captain, old fellow," he pouted, "let's just turn this boat around and go back. Y'know, after you've seen one wave you've simply seen them all."

In Fewer Words

A letter to the N. Y. Sun's editor says that "to chisel" or "chiseling" is not a new word. At all. That it is in "The Book of Daniel Drew," published in 1910 in which Drew asserts:

Quiteso, quiteso. But "Tad," one of the greater products of journalism, employed it in his indoor sports cartoons long before that.

HIGH SPEED GIRL — By May Christie

She was "odd man out."

But the place was intriguing just the same. Her eye wandered, in the dimness, to the life history of Cleo that was drawn upon the walls.

As time went on—according to the story in the drawings—the lady apparently become more reckless . . . increasingly surrounded by drink and gigolos!

That was the fate of just this type, and there were other women in the room tonight who would follow it.

For years—what with their "code" of easy living, and the incessant drinks to "pep" them up" and give them the necessary sparkle that attracted MEN—so many women were heading to their ruin.

Of course—Laurel admitted it to herself—there was always an attraction in the Bohemian . . .

Something NEW! Something out of the ordinary rut! People were satiated with the humdrum!

They craved Sensation with a capital "S" . . . and were perfectly willing to pay for it.

But did they really find it, except under the transient stimulus of drink—or drugs?

Cleo, seeing Laurel was a little out of things, came over to her. She talked to the girl in a hoarse "whisky" voice.

Mrs. Desmond and Imogen were both flirting with their handsome Englishmen. Cleo—rather "lit" herself—starting propounding to Laurel her own theory of life.

Well, it hadn't LANDED Cleo very far. Now had it?

The bartender came up with trays of more drinks. A dollar apiece. Mrs. Desmond purchased a second booklet.

The insipid creature at the piano played a love song. And Imogen and Mrs. Desmond snuggled closer to their escorts.

The place became fuller. The little bar downstairs was crowded.

PLACE IS RAIDED

Avid to be "in" on everything was she. She was bored with herself, with her own futile crowd. And in a place like this—where the so-called Intelligentsia came as well as the riff-raff—ANYTHING might happen.

It did. In an unexpected way . . . and yet NOT so unexpected after all, since—despite the bribes to "the cops"—they were all sitting on a metaphorical volcano.

The POLICE suddenly raided this notorious speak-easy.

Cleo was calm. She had been in on many such occasions.

But Laurel thought—"What on earth will my people say when they see my name in tomorrow morning's papers?"

As for Imogen, she was quite jubilant about it. It would put up her stock with Schumph . . . Sammy Schumph who enjoyed and appreciated the bright face of danger!

She told herself that if it hadn't been for her UNCERTAINTY of him, she wouldn't have been here at all . . .

He hadn't 'phoned her since her return to town. Then today, Imogen's dagger about the "widow in the offing" . . .

That had upset her, and made her ready to plunge into anything.

Under his influence, she had sought to "improve her mind," and had chosen to read Anatole France, whose works were fascinating, but disturbing.

SEES DAD WITH GIRL

The police let them leave. Imogen immediately telephoned Schumph.

He was her rich "Sugar." He would take them all to some cheery night club.

The Englishman seemed rather high-hat when Schumph met the party at the entrance to the Lido. But as he paid their way, they followed the biblical injunction about "fools" . . . and "suffered" him, if not gladly, at least tolerantly.

They had a table for six not far from the dance floor, with a couple of waiters assiduously attentive.

There were lovely women here galore, and the musical clink of ice in glasses.

Suddenly Imogen exclaimed, staring across the room: "Why, there's Ruby over there . . . the red-haired chorus girl who got so tight that night in the chapel in the cemetery! You remember, Laurel?"

But Laurel wasn't staring at Ruby. She was staring at Ruby's escort, who was pouring out champagne for her, and had his arm about her . . .

It was Laurel's father!

A "sugar daddy!" Schumph was that—to Imogen.

They were all in the same mess, then! Herself . . . Dad and Connie!

What was the world coming to?

Would Imogen and Mrs. Desmond see . . .? And, if so, would they gossip about it?

And a sudden fierce loyalty to her home, such as it was, swept over Laurel.

Mingled with resentment, too. Why COULDN'T one have an anchor anywhere? Why couldn't one's home be a HAVEN?

She felt furiously indignant with dad, and Connie, and Imogen, and Mrs. Desmond . . . ALL of them!

This fat man at her side, too, whom Timmy Tewson had told her was mixed up in the narcotic gang! Schumph had had the start of his fortune in training 16-year-old boys as "runners for drug pedddlers! according to Timmy's story.

Of course, that tale might have its roots in jealousy.

But it fitted in with Schumph's queer life, and the way that money flowed from his hands like the River Hudson!

There was even a report that he had garnered some of his huge profits by selling—(in place of heroin)—roach powder and tooth powder to the crazed addicts!

Through middle-men and peddlers, be it said.

It was a horrible story, were it true . . .

But Imogen didn't seem to care how tainted the man's money might be, provided it bought her orchids, good times, and diamonds . . .

She had said airily to her friend—"Don't be a prude! Everybody's making money today out of the booze racket."

"But DRUGS, Imogen? That can mean a long sentence in the penitentiary! And the dope trailers are everywhere, and you'll be mixed in it if you go around with Sammy!"

"Mind your own business, Laurel Oakes! What's it matter to you whether Sammy's in the hooch or the narcotic racket?"

Gangsters? Gunmen? Murderers? And eventually Sing Sing?

Once—and once only—had she gone to Schumph's apartment with Imogen.

To a hectic party he had "thrown."

She'd go home now—make an excuse to Schump—rush off before Imogen and Mrs. Desmond returned to the table.

But as she rose and half turned, she saw across the place that her father had risen too and was wrapping an ermine cloak about Ruby's shoulders.

Ruby wore a great corsage of orchids, mixed with lily-of-the-valley, and an array of diamond bracelets to the elbow.

"Cheating" on each other, weren't they? Dad with a brazen chorus girl, and Connie with a dance instructor!

Well, neither of them aimed high, did they?

He was leaving now. Laurel lowered her head as Ruby—not recognizing her, of course—went strutting by the very table where she sat, followed by Laurel's father.

She was glad HE hadn't seen her.

What explanation could he give?

She wasn't the only black sheep! It appeared there were now THREE in the family!

* * *

Dad hadn't returned when she got home, although it was 11:30.

But her mother was in the long living room of the apartment on Park avenue, pacing restlessly from one end of the floor to the other.

There were deep circles under Connie's eyes. Her face was white and drawn. She wore a crimson velvet negligee.

Had she discovered about Ruby? About Dad's fling with other women?

But maybe she—Laurel—was all wrong there, and this evening was just a sort of a sidestep for him?

"What's eating you, mums? You look all het up about something."

"Come in. Shut that door." Her voice was staccato.

Laurel obediently did so, and dropped into a chair.

She felt all tired out. She regarded her mother curiously.

"What's happened, Connie?"

"If I tell you, Laurel—" Connie sank on the sofa, opposite her daughter, and fumbled for a cigarette out of a silver box—"you mustn't tell a soul. Now promise!"

"Whoops. I'll be mum as the Sphinx. Shoot, mother."

"My pearl necklace has gone. The one your father gave me three years ago. It cost $7,000."

"Heavens! When? Where? How? And you ask me to keep quiet about it!"

"You see—it was like this—" her mother's lips trembled—"I wore it tonight when I was dining with Mr. Diaz—in a little restaurant——"

"Ah!" Laurel's mouth fell open. But only for a moment. "So—you think HE took the string?"

"Oh, I don't know—I don't KNOW—" Connie raised harrassed eyes to her daughter. "It was in the taxi, coming home with him, that I first missed it. He and the driver and I searched every corner and cushion and cranny of the machine, and then we drove right back to the restaurant. It wasn't there. Diaz said he would find it for me, and I was to go home and have a good night's sleep and not worry . . ."

"But, mother," said Laurel, "the thing to do right away is inform the police!"

Her mother put her two hands to her face. "I can't do that. You see—it would all come out—"

"What would come out? You tell me and I'll stand by you, mums, and help you the best I can," said Laurel staunchly, though her heart was sinking.

You mean—you're pretty sure it was Diaz who took the string?"

Connie stared up at her, white-faced. "I've lent him money—several times. And tonight—tonight he said he had to have more—he needed more margin—some stocks of his were plunging in the market—"

When Your Cough Hangs On, Mix This at Home

For coughs due to colds, the best remedy that money could buy can easily be mixed at home. It saves money and gives you the most reliable, quick-acting medicine you ever used. The way it takes hold of stubborn coughs, giving immediate relief, is astonishing.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and fill up with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. It's no trouble at all to mix, and when you once use it, you will never be without it. Keeps perfectly and tastes good—children really like it.

It is surprising how quickly this loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and soothes the inflamed membranes. At the same time, part of the medicine is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes, and helps the system throw off the whole trouble. Even those severe coughs which follow cold epidemics, are promptly ended.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form. Nothing known in medicine is more helpful in cases of severe coughs and bronchial irritations.

DOLL LADY

Has Been So Deluged With Requests For

'Honeybunches'

That She Will Continue the Distribution Another Week After Christmas to Take Care of the Demands of the Little Girls of Pittsburgh and Vicinity

Eileen Kerner, 1732 Fifth Ave., New Kensington, Pa.

Read the Doll Lady's Message Today!

Dear Little Girls:—

I can now see where I must extend my "Honeybunch" doll distribution until the New Year. I am swamped with requests for "Honeybunch" and am keeping my headquarters open every night to expedite the delivery of the dolls. I knew that there was going to be a tremendously big demand for my new doll this year, but I never dreamed that I would be deluged. Fortunately, I have a big supply of dolls on hand, the Sun-Telegraph has given me plenty of help and every little girl who has done what I told her to do, or who does it before Christmas, will surely have her "Honeybunch" for the Yuletide holiday. There is still ample time to earn a dolly for yourself, but you must work fast if you want her for Christmas. Just bear in mind that anything worth having is worth working for and "Honeybunch" is well worth having.

She's just a big gorgeous, beautiful doll—DIFFERENT from all other dolls. She's richly dressed in organdy, has sweet dimples, a smile of sunshine, rubber hands and arms that can be bathed, rubber panties, a pacifier, and your heart will warm right up to "Honeybunch" when you hear her voice. She is almost as tall as the newspaper page is long—almost too big for many little girls. "Honeybunch" makes a wonderful playmate.

Now if you want a "Honeybunch" send me your name and address by mail today and I'll write and tell you how you can have a big, adorable dolly before the holidays. But you must not delay if you want "Honeybunch" for Christmas.

Here are the names of some of the little girls of Pittsburgh who have already taken "Honeybunch" home for a playmate: Madge Evans, 13 Pine St.; Margaret Flamman, 109 Elmont St.; Louise Peterson, 212 S. Graham Ave.; Vera Zipk, 239 Forty-fourth St.; Mercedes Runsfelder, 421 Pearl St.; Mary Nichol, 800 Lapish Road; Josephine Licata, 962 Brookline Blvd., and Beverly Ann Boyle, 1437 Sheffield St.

Cause of Missed Kicks. • Alexander to Return.
Thrills in Floor Play. No Mack Slump Seen.
Another Kickoff Idea. Old Cue Debt Paid.

EYES OF BOOTER NOT KEPT ON BALL

IN NO PREVIOUS season of football were there so many failures to kick the extra point after touchdown as in 1931, and never before were so many games lost through the missing of that single marker. The loss of skill at kicking goals from field in recent years appeared to have extended this fall to the department of booting them after touchdown. Only a few players, such as Jim MacMurdo at Pitt, were credited with anything like fairly consistent success at the specialty. MacMurdo almost set a record for the season when he made good in four out of five tries against Nebraska on Thanksgiving Day.

Jim MacMurdo

Casting about for the explanation of the many failures to kick the extra point, some veteran football men are of the opinion that it is to be found in the very first lesson in golf. That it is to look at the ball and keep on looking at it. Don't raise your head. The golfer who lifts his head or takes his eyes off the ball is lost, and possibly that has been the trouble with the goal kickers.

MANY OF THE players who were called on this year to try for the extra point were too quick to take their eyes off the pigskin. They were too hasty to look at the goal posts or couldn't keep their attention off the opposing players rushing in. They have been likened to the chap seen on every golf course who tries to see his dreamed of 250-yard drive down the fairway before he hits the ball.

Of course, the goal kicker has more to think about than the golfer, notably the presence on the field of enemy players who will try to block his efforts. But the successful kicker is the one who is able to forget this and everything else except the fact that he is in there to kick the ball straight, the one who can shut rushing linemen and blocking teammates out of his mind and concentrate on kicking the ball straight, with his head still down when the leather sails between the uprights.

WHETHER OR NOT Pitt wins a lot of basketball games on the present trip to the coast, one thing pretty certain is that the Carlson system will take with the natives if not with the opposing coaches. When things are going right, there isn't a court team in the land that gives the customers more thrills than do the Panthers.

Pitt has a system of attack and defense that is bound to keep the action fast and furious. And when that system is turned loose, few spectators leave their seats before the finish.

PITT IS ONE of the few teams in the country that can make stalling colorful. It has been the habit of Carlson-coached fives in the last few years to retreat into a shell when the opposition throws up a really tight zone defense. And when the Panthers decide to hold the ball they don't use any half-way measures. Against West Virginia two years ago they got away to a slight lead, and no sooner had this happened than they stopped their attack in mid-floor, while Charley Hyatt stood there and held the ball without making any attempt to pass or shoot for something like 15 minutes. This was repeated in the second half. Last year they employed the same tactics against the Mountaineers.

Charley Hyatt

COACH CARLSON has not denied that he will use the same plan this year should the enemy jam up the traffic lanes. And while the Pitt second team on paper may not look to be worth much as reserve strength, Carlson has initiated its members into the mysteries of the "figure eight" offense.

That will keep the crowd on its feet for several minutes toward the close of a game if it has started to leave. The act was put on in the Temple game here last Saturday night, and it held those who had started to move toward the exits near the end of the contest rooted in their tracks until the last second of time expired.

DIFFERING FROM THE numerous other suggestions that have been made with a view to eliminating the danger of players being injured by the flying wedge following the kick-off in football is one offered by Tommy Hughitt, veteran official and former Michigan gridder.

As he explained his theory to John Kieran, he would have the receiving side forced to take up a formation for the play in which no two players would be nearer to each other than 12 yards.

"OF COURSE, THE players could run to the wedge formation," Hughitt adds, "but it would not be as tightly formed as it is under the present style of play with three or four men lining up in the middle of the receiving territory ready to form the interference, and the ball carrier given an objective to get behind on his start up the field." As Hughitt diagrams his idea, three players of the receiving side would stand between the 10-yard stripe and the goal line, three along the 20-yard line, four at the 35, and one at the 47. And all are widely separated, spaced across the field.

WHO DO YOU think is the latest possibility as a baseball comeback? None other than your old friend Grover Cleveland Alexander. The once great pitcher has been playing golf with William Wrigley, Jr., on Catalina Island, and their daily association finally led to Alexander's being proffered a job by the Cub owner.

Whether Wrigley intends to make room for Alexk in Chicago or on one of his minor league clubs has not developed, but there is a chance that the veteran may bob up with the Cubs as a relief pitcher. The former star has been adhering to the accepted training rules for four months and Wrigley believes there is much good baseball service left in him.

THE VIEW THAT the overthrow of the A's in the 1931 world series signaled their start down hill and that they won't be as strong next year as in the last three seasons is not shared by Joe McCarthy, Yankee skipper. He figures they'll be just as good as ever and the club which any other will have to beat out to win the flag.

You won't need to weep for the Athletics, McCarthy says. Their defeat in the world series won't hurt their morale, for they carried the fight to seven games. Mark has two great pitchers who will deliver again, the A's are strong defensively and there are four men on the club who can drive in runs.

Tommy Hueston

EIGHTEEN YEARS IS a long time to wait for revenge, but it took Tommy Hueston that span to clear up an account with the veteran Cuban cueist, Alfredo DeOro. Back in 1913, Hueston was nosed out for a three-cushion billiard crown by DeOro, who came from behind to win by a whisker. Hueston later won both the pocket and angle titles, but he was still waiting for a chance to even his score with DeOro.

He got it the other night in the tournament for the New York State pocket billiard championship, when he stopped the Cuban in an important game, 50 to 45, in 76 innings. There was plenty of safety in that game 18 years ago, and the latest battle was one of the same sort. At times Hueston and DeOro devoted more energy to defense than to scoring and their high runs were only four and five, respectively.

NATIONAL LEAGUE
LAST NIGHT'S RESULT

Chicago	4—Detroit 1

*Overtime.

By CARL W. SHATTO

The front line that performed in heroic fashion as the Yellow Jackets spurted to gain the International Hockey League title play-offs last season will be seen in action as a unit for the first time in the new campaign at Duquesne Garden tonight as the local icemen renew their warfare with the Syracuse Stars.

The line in question is the combination of Whitey Fields at center and Tory Gregg and Cam Proudlock at the wings. Split up as a result of the signing of much new talent this fall, the old dependable trio was put back together when the Reidmen invaded Syracuse on Tuesday and all the Fields-Gregg-Proudlock line did was account for three of the goals in Pittsburgh's 4-3 victory.

As a result of its great showing, this line will remain intact tonight.

RODDEN ON THIRD LINE

Because of the fine manner in which Earl Miller teamed up with Ty Arbour and Frank Ingram, these speed merchants will be permitted to retain their places in the starting lineup. Coach Charley Reid said today. Fields, Gregg and Proudlock will skate as front line No. 2 and Eddie Rodden, expert play-making center, who is suffering from a hip injury, will perform with Milt Halliday and Tex White on the third front line until he regains top form.

Rodden is not at all out of place when skating with White and Halliday, for both are experienced wingmen who know what to do with a puck when a center feeds them a pass in scoring position.

Gordy Fraser, defense ace, who was out with a knee injury last week, battled through a big part of the fray in Syracuse, but he still has not regained his best form, and Joe Matte will have to provide relief for both Gordy and Art Berlett.

SYRACUSE STRENGTHENED

The Stars, who come here tonight, are little changed from the Syracuse team that battled the Jackets to a 2-2 tie in the season opener at Duquesne Garden. George Himes, brother of Normie Himes, of New York American fame, has been obtained from New Haven by Manager Mickey Roach to strengthen the Stars' defense, but Joe Miller, former Pittsburgh goalie, now in the Syracuse nets, will continue to hold a major portion of the local fans' interest.

The game tonight will mark the Jackets' last home appearance until December 31, when Cleveland will appear here. A game with Buffalo, originally scheduled for next Thursday night at the Garden, has been postponed.

The Jackets today are sharing the fourth notch in the standings, but the race is so close that the locals can vault into the runner-up berth by winning tonight. First place, too, is not so far away but that the Reidmen can see it without the aid of a telescope. The probable lineup.

Stecker Honored In Resolution At Harrisburg

HARRISBURG, Pa., Dec. 17.—(AP.)—The House of Representatives yesterday paid tribute to Ray Stecker, of Hazleton Army football star, in adopting a resolution sponsored by Representative Oliver Gickling, of Hazleton.

"The House glories in the prowess of Stecker and congratulates him on the enviable record he has made," the resolution states.

Describing him as the hero of the service games of 1930 and 1931, the resolution declares him to be "the cannonball that scuttled the Navy's ship and changed the spirited tone of 'anchors aweigh' to that of a mournful funeral dirge."

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE TRENCH OF BAYONETS—The Trench of Bayonets was consecrated as a war monument by the French government in December, 1920. It commemorates the spot where 50 French soldiers—the remnant of a battalion heroically fighting before Verdun—were entombed by a single German shell in June, 1916. The buried French soldiers still hold their guns, on top of which the bayonets project from the soil. George F. Rand, of Buffalo, made a gift of 500,000 francs for the purpose of erecting a fitting memorial which now covers the site of one of the most pathetic mementos of the World War.

CUE TITLE NEAR FOR GREENLEAF

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 17.—(AP.)—The defending champion, a former champion, and a youngster in his first "big" tournament play, stand between Ralph Greenleaf, of New York, and another championship in the world pocket billiard competition. Greenleaf, 10 times a champ, has only to win one of the remaining three games to be assured of at least a tie for the title.

The New Yorker scored his eighth victory by downing Onofrio Lauri, of Brooklyn, 125 to 39 in 19 innings yesterday. He still has George Kelly, of Philadelphia; Erwin Rudolph, of Cleveland, defending champion, and Frank Taberski, of Schenectady, N. Y., to play.

Marcel Camp, Detroit, won over Robert Lindbloom, of Seattle, 125 to 40, in 15 innings.

McKeesport Elects Vidnovic Captain

Burke Vidnovic, star halfback, was elected captain of McKeesport High School's 1932 football team at the annual banquet held last night by the Monogram Club in a McKeesport hotel.

Cletus Forbes, retiring captain, received much praise from the speakers, among whom were Attorney James Ruby, Monogram Club secretary; Coach Frank Wolfe, of Waynesburg College; Don Harrison, of Pitt; Joe Donchess, of Pitt; Eddie Hirshberg, Pitt captain; Julius Levin, of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph sports staff; Havey J. Boyle, Bill Sullivan, McKeesport High tutor; Dave Parker and Dr. J. B. Richey, Tube City Superintendent of Schools. The Rev. H. P. Pullin offered the invocation.

SPORT VIGNETTES

You can't get stung calling Ralph Daugherty, the center of this year's Pitt football team, Bees . . . That was his nickname when he was starring at Tarentum High School . . . His favorite sport was to go out and cut down bee trees, hence the Bees moniker . . . Another former Tarentum star, Jim Kesner, became Sunny Kesner when he went to Carnegie Tech and starred as quarterback on the Tartan team in the days before Jimmy Robertson, Howard Harpster, et. al. . . . Another Tarentumite, now a Pitt freshman, is Tom Rooker, known to his intimates as Eaf—eaf you can believe it.

Speaking of nicknames and such, Frank Rykoskey, of Benwood, W. Va., who has been elected captain of the West Liberty College eleven for next fall, is yclept Cateye . . . He is a veteran quarterback and was an all-state selection in high school . . . Injuries kept him out of the game most of last season.

Speedy, slugging, smashing, spectacular, savage and sensational . . . Hard-hitting, hustling, hammering, hurricane, Hercules . . . Clever, crashing, charging, courageous, cyclonic, college . . . That's what the circulars of Charley Harvey say about his heavyweight boxer, Steve Hamas, the former Penn State football star . . . One gathers that Harvey rather fancies Steve as a fighter.

Steve's record is 23 knockout victories and three decisions in 26 professional bouts.—HARRY KECK.

GLENN SPENCER HERE

Glenn Spencer, one of the stars of the Pirates' club staff, came to Pittsburgh today from his Binghamton, N. Y., home for a short visit with friends. Glenn drove here and at once paid his respects to the home office. The clever right-hander has done much hunting since the season closed and he is in excellent condition. He will return home tomorrow.

LOBERT JERSEY PILOT

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Dec. 17.—(AP.)—John T. (Hans) Lobert was appointed manager of the local ball club yesterday. Lobert was a major league star for many years, being with the New York Giants during a part of his career, and later became coach and also manager of minor league clubs.

CHICAGO, Dec. 17.—(AP.)—Bill Cunningham, former New York Giant and Boston Braves outfielder, has been engaged as coach by the Chicago White Sox.

PITT BOXERS SHOW WELL

Coach Joe Orsini's proteges showed up well as the University of Pittsburgh boxing team, with 400 onlookers, engaged in 10 exhibition bouts in the Stadium last night.

One knockout, of a technical variety, was scored when Jack Schricker won over Albert Schwartz, in the 160-pound class. Referee Mike Bazzone stopping the melee in the first round.

The scheduled contest between two football players, Johnny Luch and Johnny Love, heavyweights, did not materialize, but Love boxed an exhibition with Ed Thompson, of the freshman team, and appeared flashy, although honors were about even. The summary:

115-pound class—Charles Carmella defeated Norman McCormick, 3 rounds. Angelo Puglia, Uniontown Junior College, defeated George Patterson, 3 rounds.
135-pound class—Tom Passafume defeated Willie Schemy, 3 rounds. Jack Cimatti, Uniontown Junior College, defeated Henry Martin, 3 rounds. Joe Namlik defeated William Evans, 3 rounds.

CHARITY GAME NETS $28,828

By JESS CARVER

The football players of Carnegie Tech and Duquesne pounded out no less than $28,828.27 on the cash register of true sportsmanship in their charity game, two weeks ago, in the Pitt Stadium, for the benefit of the unemployed of Allegheny County. The contest itself, a hard and bitterly fought battle, resulted in a scoreless deadlock.

Last night, at the Keystone Club, Frank R. Phillips, chairman of the Allegheny County Relief Fund Committee, tendered the members of the two squads, the coaches and athletic directors of the schools and members of the general committee a fine dinner, at which the official figures on the receipts of the game were announced. Carnegie and Duke players sat side by side, the enmities of the gridiron forgotten, and listened to Chairman Phillips' fine tribute to their unselfishness in meeting in real, honest-to-goodness combat, that the less fortunate in our midst might benefit.

The sum realized by the game will care for 250 needy families for the winter. There were only two speakers at last night's affair, Chairman Phillips and the Rev. Father Callahan, of Duquesne University, both of whom praised the players and all those who worked to put the game over, to the skies.

Chairman Phillips also presented the two captains with fine silver loving cups. The chairman had promised a cup to the winner of the game, and when it resulted in a tie, graciously doubled his offer.

Pitt Basketball Coach.
Written Exclusively for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Dec. 17.—Again Ochsenhirt was telescoped as he was about to shoot beneath the basket and had to jump with 15 seconds to play, as Pitt defeated Indiana, 29-24, here last night. Willy Kowallis, on the ensuing play, hooked an overhead field goal to tie the score at 22-22, and the game went into the extra period. First Indiana missed a foul and then W. Kowallis scored one. Indiana went ahead on a field goal, then S. Kowallis and Lawry scored two-plyers. These were followed by two foul goals by Smith.

Dr. Carlson

Every one of the Pitt boys was admirable in their wonderful fight against physical odds. Fifteen hours on a train before the Wisconsin game and 18 hours before last night's game, with lunch at 6:15 and the game at 7:25, is not conducive to make one want to fight in the presence of 6,500 hostile fans, or someone about 40 pounds heavier than you.

EXPECTS TOUGH FOES

They say out here that Indiana, Purdue and Butler should only lose games when they play among themselves. They do plenty of scouting out here and we ought to have lots of difficulty tomorrow and Saturday nights when we continue our so-called suicide schedule.

Last night's victory gave us one win and one defeat in our long western tour.

Perhaps this trip may fall in the line of overemphasis, but we want to prove to the world that Pop Warner was correct when he said, "Those Pittsburgh boys have a lot of steel in them."

If they never win another game their parents, friends, school and community can well be proud of them. All is well and carrying on. The lineup:

PLAY PURDUE TOMORROW

Tomorrow the Panthers continue their merry way by taking on tough Purdue at Lafayette, Ind. Purdue, with a star in its lineup of the caliber of Johnny Wooden, will be as tough, if not tougher, than either Wisconsin or Indiana.

Meanwhile, Carnegie's Tartans inaugurate their intercollegiate campaign against Kentucky Wesleyan University in Kentucky. Tomorrow, the Plaid will continue its short road trip by taking on Kentucky University, and on Saturday will stack up against St. Xavier in Cincinnati. Then the boys will return home and get into condition for the game with Yale next week.

Thiel's Lutheran aggregation meets the Grove City Merchants' independent team in Grove City this evening, giving canny Bob Thorn, the Grove City College mentor, a swell opportunity to scout the Greenvillians. Westminster takes on Wooster College at Wooster, and Fairmont Teachers of West Virginia battle Marietta College at Marietta.

DUKES TO MEET W. & J. IN '32

Duquesne athletic authorities announced today that arrangements have been completed for a football game between the Dukes and Wash-Jeff at Forbes Field on November 5, 1932.

The last time the two teams met was in 1928, the Dukes winning a tough game.

W. & J. PLAYS DETROIT

WASHINGTON, Pa., Dec. 17.—In announcing a game with Detroit University October 8, and Duquesne at Pittsburgh November 5, the gridiron schedule of Washington and Jefferson College for 1932 is rapidly taking shape. The following games have been booked:

October 1, West Virginia Wesleyan here; October 8, Detroit at Detroit; October 15, Carnegie Tech at Pittsburgh; October 22, Lafayette at Easton; November 5, Duquesne at Pittsburgh; November 12, Bucknell here; November 19, Marquette at Milwaukee; November 26, West Virginia at Wheeling.

FORMER BUCS FINISH ONE, TWO IN RACE

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

A pair of Pirate castaways staged an incidental race for shortstop honors of the American League this year. Official fielding records of the league, published today, disclose that Hal Rhyne of the Boston Red Sox, finished ahead of Joe Cronin, Washington star, in fielding percentage.

Joe Cronin

The two Californians were all over the position in their quest for drives from opponents' bats. Cronin led the league in total chances and total chances accepted but Rhyne was in a few less games than Sunny Joe and therefore had a larger percentage of chances per game. Hal hung up a mark of .963 for 147 games.

Rhyne enjoyed a great season for the Red Sox in many respects. During the recent world series I was told by John (Shauno) Collins, manager of the Boston Club, that Hal was as good as any shortstop in the league in the past campaign.

Cronin and Lynford Lary, Yankee star, played in all of their clubs' 155 games. The latter also had a remarkable season, and, like his rivals, he is a "Native Son."

Other rare fielding achievements, as revealed by The Howe News Bureau, follow:

OSCAR MELILLO STARS

American League fielding for 1931 was characterized by the machine-like precision of the champion A's and Washington; the brilliant season-long work of Oscar Melillo, St. Louis second baseman, who with 917 chances accepted came within 17 of tying the Lajoie record of 1908; Center Fielder Tom Oliver's record of 448 accepted chances with only three accompaning errors; generally mediocre work at third base and sparkling season records of First Baseman Burns, of St. Louis, and Blue, of Chicago. The work of the last named is especially noteworthy because the White Sox finished eighth in fielding as they did in batting. St. Louis and Chicago each turned in two triple plays, which is unusual.

The Philadelphia Athletics made only 141 errors, thus breaking the record formerly held by the Yankees, 144 in 1923. Washington made 142 errors.

The New York Yankees' catching staff went through the season without a single passed ball chalked against them, thus making a new record.

Irving Burns, of St. Louis, was the ranking first baseman with a season average of .993. Sweeney, Foxx and Fonseca each had the same percentage, but none played in as many games as the Browns' recruit nor as brilliantly. Burns had 125 assists in 143 games and participated in 131 double plays.

Myer, of Washington, and Bishop, of Philadelphia, tied for first place among second baseman with .984, but, as stated above, Melillo with 428 putouts, 543 assists, 118 double plays and only 32 errors for a mark of .968 easily carries off the honors for the keystone station.

DICKEY LEADS CATCHERS

Third base play was far below par as a whole. Dykes, of Philadelphia, and Bluege, of Washington, sharing about equally such honors as there were. Rhyne led the shortstops in percentage with .963, and with 5.42 chances per game was second to Rogell with 5.69, the latter playing in 62 games.

In addition to Oliver, mentioned above, Sam West, of Washington, Averill, of Cleveland, Chapman, of New York, and Roy Johnson, of Detroit, were prominent throughout the season. Playing in 127 games, 19 less than Oliver, West had 402 putouts and 13 assists, Averill in 155 games had 398 putouts and nine assists, Chapman in 137 games had 300 putouts and 14 assists and Johnson in 150 games in right field had 332 putouts and 25 assists.

Pitcher Wilcey Moore, of Boston, is credited with 70 assists in 185 innings, practically three and one-half assists per game. Wesley Ferrell had 74 assists, but pitched 276 innings, 31 games approximately. Hudlin had 65 assists in 254 innings, Jack Russell 633 in 232, and Whitehill 62 in 272 innings.

William Dickey led the catchers in percentage with .996 in 125 games. Richard Ferrell had the most assists, 86 in 108 games, and tied with Tate for the most double plays, 11. Cochrane, Berry and Ferrell each were charged with six passed balls.

Monessen Grid Squad Banqueted

MONESSEN, Pa., Dec. 17.—The annual football banquet of the Monessen High was held last evening in the Junior High cafeteria, with a large crowd attending. Robert Thorne, athletic director at Grove City College, was the guest speaker. Short talks were given by the Rev. Elliott, Eli Wolf, Dr. F. C. Duvall, C. H. Dils, Mayor Carl Woodward, Carl Ralph Zelaska, Coach Preston Ditty and Supt. Fausold.

CARNEGIE GRID FETE CARDED TONIGHT

By JULIUS LEVIN

Rankin High School, coached by Jock Rosenberg, former Duquesne University star, is going to make a determined bid for the Section VIII championship of the W. P. I. A. L. basketball race this season, judging from the showing made by the team so far this season. Although its enrollment is among the smallest in the W. P. I. A. L. ranks, Rosenberg's quintet has shown enough class this season to stamp it as one of the best operating in this district. Rankin High School is rated as a Class B school due to its small enrollment, but a lot of Class A quintets are certain to find it a difficult task in stopping this team on the floor.

Jock Rosenberg

Unlike the football races during which the larger schools hold a decided edge due to the fact that they have more material available with which to mold a winning combination, basketball plays no favorites. In many instances Class B schools have shown a decided superiority over their more heralded opponents, one of the reasons there is so much interest manifest in the W. P. I. A. L. sectional races.

FACES TOUGH FOES

Despite the fact that he has a small squad at his command, Rosenberg has succeeded in building a floor machine that is going to create a lot of trouble in the Section VIII race. Rankin faces some real opposition in this section as it includes in its membership Johnny Reed's Scott High team, state champion of last winter; Jim Hudson's Braddock quintet and Foxy Miller's Turtle Creek Union floor machine. Norwin and Jeannette also were members of this section, but withdrew several weeks ago.

An idea of Rankin's strength this season may be obtained from the scores piled up by Rosenberg's team against East Pittsburgh and Swissvale. Rankin swamped East Pittsburgh, 34-5, and beat Swissvale, 26-15.

CARNEGIE BANQUET

The Rotary Club, of Carnegie, will honor the town's high school football team with a banquet this evening. The affair has been arranged as a father-son banquet. Letters will be awarded 19 members of the football team.

Dr. Howard R. Wilson, chairman of the boys' work committee of the Rotary Club, will be toastmaster. Among the speakers will be E. J. Cole, donor of the cup bearing his name which is presented annually to the team winning the Carnegie-Crafton game; Joe Bach, Duquesne University line coach; Frank A. Pierkarski, former all-America star, and Coach Dick Schumaker.

Har-Brack High walloped Kittanning, 45 to 13, and Peabody High was defeated by Rankin, 24-23, in yesterday's feature contests. Clay knocked off Walton, 33 to 12, and Spencer beat Elkview, 25 to 19.

Dribbles

Followers of the Tayler Allderdice basketball team are singing the praises of John Irwin's passers as a result of the quintet's last-minute victory over the Pitt Freshmen last Saturday, 19-17. This team is going to bear watching in the Section I fight of the City League. Homestead, a member of Section VII, will be met tomorrow at Allderdice.

The Rankin High quintet faces one of its toughest tests of the season Saturday, when the Pitt Varsity B team is tackled on the Scott High floor in North Braddock.

Not disheartened by the defeat suffered at the hands of Scott High, Homestead is hopeful of better luck in its battle with Braddock at Homestead tonight.

Carver and DiMeolo Rimersburg Speakers

RIMERSBURG, Pa., Dec. 17.—Albert (Luby) DiMeolo, assistant football coach at New York University and former Pitt star, and Jess Carver, football writer for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, will be the guest speakers at the annual football banquet tendered the Rimersburg High School football squad here tonight.

Colin Stewart, Carnegie Tech varsity end, also will be in attendance and will make a talk. Arthur James, well known Rimersburg businessman and civic leader, is to serve as toastmaster.

ALL-AMERICANS HONORED

Ten local college players have their all-America Board of Football awards today following a presentation ceremony in the studio of WCAE, the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph radio station, last night, at which all of them were presented to the radio audience and said a word or two for listeners.

Jess Quatse, all-America tackle of Pitt, said:

"It is indeed a pleasure to be honored by so representative a body of football men. I hardly know what to say except that I wish Jim MacMurdo who played the other tackle position for Pitt, were in my shoes. He likes the tough spots. There was an all-America player for you. A great player. And the other players on the team played fine football, too. The greatest kick of my life came from playing with them."

Quatse received a certificate designating him a member of the All-America Board of Football team. The following players received Cards of Merit for having made the Honorable Mention list:

MacMurdo, Collins, Milligan, Daugherty, Heller and Reider, Pitt; Capt. Armentrout and Sample, Carnegie Tech, and Capt. Ferrare, Duquesne.

Harry Keck, sports editor of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, who made the presentation talk, stressed the high esteem in which college players are held as idols of the younger generation and pointed out to the players the moral obligation they owe the growing children of setting an example which the latter may follow.

DISTRICT BOY HONORED

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Dec. 17.—William N. Lewis, a Waynesburg youth, who is a senior this year at the University of Maryland, College Park, Md., has been named manager of the school's varsity boxing team.

The Y. M. H. A. basketball team will meet the Akron Firestones tonight in a National Industrial League game at the Y. M. H. A. The boys from the Rubber City are leading the race and hope to enhance their advantage at the expense of the Bellefielders.

Iz Clovsky, injured guard, who has been missing from the last two games, will be back in the lineup for the Y boys. The Firestones come to town with a team which is generally admitted as the class of the circuit and if the Bellefielders can turn them back it will go a long way towards making up for some of the ground lost during the past few weeks.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Stocks Decline

Lone Star Gas Steady

SELLERS STILL IN MAJORITY IN MARKET

Several Leading Shares Drop 1 to 5 as Coppers Stiffen; Steel Under 38

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—(AP.)—Sellers were still in the majority in the securities markets today.

Several prominent stocks were depressed 1 to 5 points to still lower bottom levels for the downward cycle, but the selling was of a deliberate rather than a hasty character, and the aggregate volume was moderate. Coppers stiffened in contrast to the tendency elsewhere, as did some high grade bonds.

In shares, United States Steel broke about 2 points, goes slightly under 38 to a new low since 1908, if no account is taken of the increased capitalization. American Telephone declined 3 to a new low for the past nine years. The American Tobacco issues and Eastman lost 5 points and shares off 2 or so included American Can, Allied Chemical, Union Pacific, Consolidated Gas and Sears. Standard of New Jersey was sold in some volume, losing a point. New York Central held fairly steady. Extreme gains of a point or two in Kennecott, Anaconda and American Smelting were somewhat reduced later.

Copper shares reflected an immediate stiffening of the red metal price to 7 cents a pound, it has recently sold as low as 6¼—on news that Phelps Dodge Corporation had withdrawn its resignation from Copper Exporters, Inc., the export association formed under the Webb-Pomerene Act. The copper trade felt that a possible reorganization of the association was pending, which would expedite plans to curtail production.

U. S. Steel's penetration of the low level of 1915, which was 38, is somewhat misleading in view of the 40 per cent stock dividend declared in 1927. While the price per share went to the lowest level since 1908, the aggregate market valuation has not slipped below the levels of 1915. To do that the present stock would have to sell down to about 28 a share.

Selling of American Telephone was said in some brokerage circles to reflect in part the uncovering of stop loss orders. In circles close to the management it is said that the $9 annual dividend will be fully earned this year.

Board Estimates Car Needs Lower

The Great Lakes Regional Advisory Board estimates freight car requirements for that district during the first quarter of 1932 at 289,114 cars comparing with actual requirements of 304,808 in the first quarter of 1931.

Canadian Money Market Plan Discussed

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 17.—(AP.)—Sir Charles Gordon, president of the Bank of Montreal and a group of Canadian bankers discussed with the Canadian prime minister the question of establishment of a Canadian money market designed to relieve depreciation of the Canadian dollar in the New York market.

It was said the establishment of an exchange in Canada would help the Dominion to declare its monetary independence of New York bankers who are now the controlling factors in setting the price of the Canadian dollar.

SETBACK GIVEN TO GRAINS

CHICAGO, Dec. 17.—Grain prices averaged lower early today, influenced by fresh downturns of securities. Argentine wheat crop advices were also of a bearish tenor. Opening unchanged to ¾c lower, wheat afterward underwent a general sag. Corn started ⅛c off to ¼c up and subsequently scored gains all around, responsive to 117,000,000 bushels decrease in official estimates of the 1931 corn crop.

Adding to handicaps of bulls were enlarged exports of wheat from Russia, 1,328,000 bushels this week against 520,000 last week. On the other hand primary receipts of wheat in the United States continued to shrink, totalling only 399,000 bushels today, compared with 538,000 a week ago and 773,000 at this time last year. Something of an offset however were generous snowfalls in parts of domestic winter wheat territory southwest.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—The curb market slid off in lighter trading volume today. Heaviness of oil shares was noticeable but there was the familiar sag to the utility division as well as a number of wide breaks in inactive issues of miscellaneous description.

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—(AP.)—Following is the list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange, giving all stocks and bonds traded (00 omitted in sales column of stock list; 000 omitted in sales column of bond list):

25 COUNTRIES DESERT GOLD STANDARD

Change Seen as Temporary Adjustment Linked With Depression by W. E. Spahr

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—The suspension of gold exports by Japan marked the abandonment in whole or in part of the gold standard by 25 countries throughout the world.

Recent monetary changes have tended to make the gold standard a rich man's exclusive feature of the United States and France.

Mr. Rukeyser

Walter E. Spahr, in the organ of the American Bankers Association, concludes that the abandonment of gold is a temporary adjustment connected with the depression, and that in due course the countries which have monetarily abandoned gold will return to currencies based on the precious yellow metal.

REMEDIES OFFERED

In considering proposals for substitutes for gold Mr. Spahr declares:

"We must face the fact that we are witnessing a recurrence of the usual crop of ideas as to what should be done in lieu of re-establishing the gold standard as well as the usual crop of articles by those legerdemainists who readily convert their hindsight into foresight and are saving with a much self-complacency that they foresaw just these things happening and therefore are entitled to tell how to correct the difficulties.

"We are having proposals for bimetalism. Bryanism is with us once again. We even have had the proposal that bimetalism be established with a ratio between gold and silver of 11 to 1, even though the market ratio between the gold and silver at the time the proposal was made was about 72 to 1.

"It would be difficult to conceive of a more fantastic proposal. It is a lesson well learned in monetary experiments that a metal overvalued at the mint will drive out the metal that is undervalued.

ALTERNATING STANDARDS

"Gold would disappear at once from the country attempting to establish bimetalism with a mint ratio between gold and silver that is above the market ratio. At all times, furthermore, the country's currency system is at the mercy of the fluctuating market ratios, with the result that alternating standards, not a bimetallic standard, would prevail.

"Even the old die-hard bimetallists of the Bryan campaign days were forced to admit that bimetalism could exist only if an international agreement could be effected by which all nations would agree to abandon their existing standards for the bimetallic in order that there would be no place to which the undervalued specie of a country could be driven.

"Such a world-wide agreement never was possible for the reason that the leading nations of the world preferred to rely upon that commodity which is universally desired."

PARIS, Dec. 17.—The weekly statement of the Bank of France shows changes in its figures from increases of 90,000,000 francs in gold holdings abroad, decreases of 30,000,000 francs in discounted bills, decreased 240,000,000 francs in bills bought abroad, increases of 80,000,000 francs in advances, decreases of 1,000,000 francs in note circulation, decreased 270,000,000 francs in sight deposits, increased 650,000,000 francs in current accounts. Ratio of reserves to sight deposits 81.25 per cent.

Beaty Sees Trouble Ahead for Oil Industry

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

THE OIL INDUSTRY is heading for more trouble unless it takes drastic measures to suppress overproduction of both oil and refined products. This warning against the complacent attitude toward the future of oil which has existed for the past three months was made by Amos L. Beaty, president of the American Petroleum Institute.

When the East Texas and Oklahoma fields were shut down under martial law, sharp declines in production resulted. But since that time output has climbed to its original levels. While the industry appeared to be making progress for a while, it now has lost all the ground it has gained. That Mr. Beaty is not unduly pessimistic, is shown by the latest oil statistics.

The Petroleum Institute figures for the week ended December 12 show that daily average production of crude oil was 2,456,650 barrels. This was 223,800 barrels a day more than at this time last year.

More Gasoline Made

THE REFINERIES ARE ADDING to the troubles of the industry by producing nearly 1,000,000 barrels of gasoline a week more than they did a year ago. In view of these facts, Mr. Beaty's warnings appear to be fully justified. His statement follows:

"Unless something is done quickly we are headed for more trouble. A tariff promptly enacted might temporarily save the situation in the United States. At some expense to foreign business it might even tide us over until the present high potentials of crude production here are reduced to safer bounds. But a tariff alone cannot save us. We must do some constructive things, or else witness demoralization and loss exceeding anything which has occurred in the recent past.

"Crude production from flowing wells is 20 per cent too high and refinery runs are 20 per cent too high. This is not a wild or extravagant statement; it is fully supported by up-to-date statistics which take into account the decline in consumption now occurring. The industry must take its choice between sanity in operations and utter collapse.

"Optimistic and lulling statements at this time are to be deplored."

New System Needed

PRORATION HAS BEEN SUBJECT to nation-wide experimentation for several years. It has helped, but it has not solved the situation. To save itself from further demoralization, the industry will have to get together on even more stringent proration measures or else will have to find some new device for controlling output.

U. S. Deficit Hits Peacetime Record

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17. (INS)—Reaching a new peacetime record, the Treasury's deficit December 15, amounted to $1,252,631,000, about $950,000,000 greater than on the same date a year ago.

Receipts for the July 1-December 15 period amounted to $888,892,000, a reduction of $322,000,000 from last year. Expenditures were $1,252,631,000, a increase of $373,000,000.

The heavy increase in the deficit and expenditures was due to the fact that $318,000,000 was credited to the sinking fund. In the same period of the 1931 fiscal year $65,000,000 had been credited to the sinking fund.

Union Trust Paying Usual $56 Dividend

The Union Trust Company of Pittsburgh has declared the regular quarterly dividend of $50, payable January 1 to stockholders of record December 10, and the regular Christmas dividend of $6 per share, payable December 15 to stock of record December 15.

Forbes

Predicts R. R. Bonds Shortly Will Rebound

By B. C. FORBES

"WHAT A REBOUND you are going to see in railway bonds one of these days," emphatically declared the man who is perhaps the most influential banker in America.

The financial community has reached the definite conclusion that either the railway employes will accept a 10 per cent reduction in wages, in exchange for certain feasible concessions, or will be compelled to take a heavier cut if settlement be delayed. The expectation is for a prompt, friendly settlement.

Mr. Forbes

WHAT, IF ANYTHING, is the National Credit Corporation doing? Gov. Ely, of Massachusetts, referring to the chain of banks closed there this week, declared:

"If federal authorities act promptly through the recently formed National Credit Corporation, a reorganization and reopening can be speedily accomplished."

Why wasn't the closing prevented? Wasn't it for exactly such purpose that Hoover proposed the organization?

An awful lot of things have been done too late during the last two years. President Hoover himself hasn't been immune from this charge. Are the bosses of the credit corporation too slow-moving?

RUBBER CONSUMPTION last month ran 3 per cent ahead of October instead of experiencing a customary heavy seasonal decline. The month's imports of crude were 37 per cent ahead of a year ago.

Yet what has been happening in our rubber manufacturing industry?

The heads of the leading companies have been cutting one another's throats—and cutting fatally profits which should be going to stockholders. If a mass meeting of stockholders of America's largest rubber companies could be held, what a protest would arise!

I rather think there would be demands that a few highly-placed executives have their wings clipped. The impression grows that some of the ruinous practices are instigated by personal jealousies. Meanwhile both wage earners and stockholders suffer needlessly.

If we had a Federal Trade Commission consisting of business statesmen animated by constructive motives, what an opportunity it would have to bring rubber leaders before it, point out to them the disastrous consequences of their conduct and outline a sound, business-like course.

What can be done?

PRESIDENTS OF LIFE insurance companies have a national association which performs invaluable service. I would suggest to the heads of Goodyear, United States Rubber, Goodrich, Firestone, etc., that they learn all about the functioning of the insurance association with a view to going and doing likewise. Cut-throat competition hurts all and benefits nobody in the end.

France, I'm told by those who should know, is not nearly so cocky in regard to Germany and to international debts as her spokesmen publicly proclaim. She would not relish arousing the ire of Germany, Britain, the United States. She isn't quite so delightfully prosperous as widely imagined. Nor are her prospects such as to inspire her statesmen to snap their fingers in the face of every other nation.

When a showdown comes, France is likely to climb down.

A FRIEND, William Law, writes:

"Twenty-three years ago I used to trace cars of iron pipe between Pittsburgh and New York when I met Fred Williamson, then a struggling railroad agent at Albany. He was always so helpful and kind, and he invited me to make his office my home.

"One day after he had done me a favor I could not repay, I said to him, 'Fred, I'm ashamed that I can't repay you, but I'm going to make a prediction that you most likely never thought of, and that is that I will live to see the day when you will be president of the New York Central.'

Is it not true that when we help others we help ourselves most of all?

TAX CASE WON BY LONE STAR

I. B. Denning, president of Lone Star Gas Corporation, sent the following wire to the Dow, Jones News Bureau today:

"A district judge at Waurika, Okla., decided in favor of Lone Star Gas Company and against the state of Oklahoma on all questions involving taxes and penalties amounting to approximately $100,000. The decision was rendered upon our demurrers to the state's petition, and is in effect a dismissal of the case to the extent taxes and penalties are involved. The only question retained by the court was the alleged discrimination in rates. This is a question of fact to be settled by evidence presented to the court and cannot be passed on by demurrer. Since all rates have been in strict accordance with schedules filed with and approved by the corporation commission, our attorneys are of the opinion that the decision virtually ends the litigation."

COPPER PRICES FIRMING UP

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—(AP)—The copper market stiffened today on news of an approaching agreement among world producers on curtailment of output.

Consumers who tried to buy copper at 6¼ cents found that it was unobtainable at that figure. Recently it was offered at 6¼ cents. Seven cents was said to be the cheapest price at which the metal could be purchased this forenoon and only limited tonnages were available at that level.

The probability of an early accord on production curtailment was indicated by an announcement that the Phelps-Dodge Corporation had withdrawn its resignation from Copper Exporters, Inc.

Pennsylvania Grade Crude Oil Lowered

OIL CITY, Pa., Dec. 17.—(AP)—Commenting on the 15-cent reduction in the price of all Pennsylvania grade crude oils, except Corning, the Oil City Derrick says:

The new prices are: Pennsylvania grade in Southwest Pennsylvania lines, $1.55; Pennsylvania grade in Eureka lines, $1.45, and Pennsylvania grade in Buckeye lines, $1.25. Tidewater and Bradford district oils also were cut 15 cents a barrel to $1.85.

ALL BUSINESS DEPENDS ON CREDIT

The credit of any individual or corporation is founded on resources and good faith. Both of these requisites can be nurtured by a good banking connection . . . one which permits the bank's officers a thorough knowledge of the customer's business and character.

ADDITIONAL SPORTS NEWS

BUTLER DENIES PRO CHARGES AT COLUMBIA

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—(AP.)—Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, took the occasion of the annual banquet of the University C Club last night to comment regarding reports published that an unofficial investigation had discovered widespread professionalism in Columbia athletics.

After reading a letter of denial sent to him by the committee of the Nacoms, a secret society, to which the published charges were attributed, he said:

"I have been criticized in the newspapers often enough myself to know that it is unwise to pay any attention to them," he said. "The best newspaper story is a story of controversy. If you attempt to answer them, it goes on for two weeks and the newspaper always has the last say. If you pay no attention, it ends in one day.

"There is no body of men in the United States more capable of building up athletics as an integral part of our educational system than those in whom that duty reposes at Columbia University—Dr. Edward W. Elliott, Dean Herbert E. Hawkes, Robert H. Barnes and the rest of them. If they cannot be trusted, then the task is impossible. There is no better lot of men anywhere.

"We have a denial here. We take it at its face value. That ends it."

ARMY-NAVY GAME LIKELY

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—(AP.)—If, as is generally anticipated the Army and Navy reconcile their differences with a view to playing football on a regularly scheduled basis in 1932, the game will be played on Saturday, December 3, probably in New York.

This information came from well-informed sources today, although the service academies have not yet actually reached the point of signing papers.

Informally Annapolis and West Point are closer together athletically than at any time since the break occurred in 1927, when Navy insisted that Army adopt the three-year varsity eligibility rule common to the colleges.

The Navy already has taken the first steps leading toward a complete reconciliation by eliminating the December football date with Pennsylvania and leaving open so far the last Saturday in November as well as the first Saturday of December.

Army is dated to play Notre Dame on November 26 at the Yankee Stadium, but West Point officials apparently have no objection to meeting the Midshipmen on the following Saturday, December 3, and this seems likely to be the arranement.

Since athletics are on a self-supporting basis at both academies, a proportionate share of the profits from the Army-Navy spectacle will be vital in keeping their budgets balanced.

WELTERS BOX TONIGHT

TONIGHT'S FIGHTS

Marty McHale vs. Tiger Joe Randall, 10 rounds; Teddy Welch vs. Jimmy Vaughn, 8 rounds, and Joey Bazzone vs. Joe Stuckey and Young Lostetter vs. Andy Kosel, 6 rounds each, McKeesport.

Al Gainer vs. Frankie Brazio, Rocco Laurie vs. Joe Fulino, Ray Edwards vs. Frankie Talamondro, Joe Botta vs. Vito Mazzeo and Joey Bobbin vs. Johnny Young, 6 rounds each, Cleveland.

The final boxing show of the year in McKeesport is slated tonight, with Marty McHale, McKeesport welterweight, boxing Tiger Joe Randall, of Elizabeth in the 10-round windup. It is a return battle, McHale having stopped Randall in a battle in the same ring three years ago.

Teddy Welch, of McKeesport and Jimmy Vaughn, of St. Michael's, box the eight-round semi-final, Joey Bazzone, of McKeesport, and Joe Stuckey, of St. Michaels, are in the second bout, and Andy Kosel, of Turtle Creek, and Young Lostetter, of McKeesport, open the affair.

Between Rounds

Buddy McArthur of McKeesport makes his debut in the N. B. C. light-heavyweight tournament in the Chicago Stadium tomorrow night, meeting Joe Zelinsky, a Chicago boy.

Charley Baxter, stablemate of McArthur, boxes Lou Saunders, of Beaver Falls, in the 10-round main bout at Fairmont, W. Va., tomorrow night.

Johnny Warner, of Clairton, and Al Iovino, of Avonvale, will box the opening bout on the Jimmy Belmont-Ted Yahner card at Motor Square Garden Christmas afternoon.

Morrison Reaches Golf Semi-Finals

PINEHURST, N. C., Dec. 17.—(AP.)—George T. Dunlap, Jr., intercollegiate golf champion, scored an easy victory in the quarter-finals of the Pinehurst Country Club's annual member tournament yesterday, advancing to the semi-finals by a 6 and 4 defeat of C. B. S. Marr, of Carnoustie, Scotland.

Robert G. Morrison of the Oakmont Club, Pittsburgh, medalist, disposed of Walter D. Hyatt, Toledo, 6 and 5. Herbert J. Blue, of Aberdeen, N. C., eliminated R. T. White, of Bayonne, N. J., and Eric D. Thomson, of Springfield, Mass., defeated Francis T. Keating, of New York. The score in each match was 6 up and 5 to play.

PITT HEADS BIG TWELVE

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—(AP.)—Pittsburgh and Colgate head two groups of eastern colleges unofficially ranked for purposes of 1931 football comparison.

There are no organized major conferences among eastern colleges, but the teams fall into distinct groups by reason of natural rivalries and common schedules.

Pittsburgh, with three victories and no defeats against members of one group, wins the Big Twelve leadership, closely followed by Bucknell, which won four games and was undefeated, but tied twice.

Colgate, which has led the other group for three years, played only two games with teams in its "conference," but won both. Its ranking is clouded, however, by the defeat suffered at the hands of New York University.

Fight Results

CITY WED

By FAITH BALDWIN

Ambitious Newlyweds Begin Struggle for Success In Strange City

She said: "Ain't we got fun?" and he kissed her soundly.

A big lad, Bill Lancaster graduated, if not cum laude then at least creditably, from Yale University the previous June. Big, with a shock of tawny blond hair and a set of very white teeth displayed against the backdrop of a permanently tanned face in a most engaging grin. His eyes were an extraordinary blue. Nevis called him Atlas the Hair affectionately.

She had known him all her short life, allowing for his one year and eight months seniority. They had grown up together in a small manufacturing town in Pennsylvania. A rather pretty town, with red brick main streets, very slippery under rain, and the residential section straggling up and down hill all, wide lawns and old trees. A town settled by those thrifty, cleanly people known erroneously as the Pennsylvania Dutch. A town in which all the wives of the leading business men did their own work and drove expensive cars. A town with a Four Hundred, a Country Club and the best golf course within a hundred miles.

Nevis Hammond and Bill Lancaster, born to the comparative purple of their surroundings, had gone to grammer school and high school together. Now, they were married—had been, for three months—and were getting their apartment settled in the last place in which they had ever expected to live together—New York.

BILL PHILOSOPHICAL

The menage consisted of a living room, large enough a bedroom, which would have been large enough had not Bill built so very big and masculine in it, a glorified kitchenette mechanical apparatus all complete and a tiled bath with shower attachments. This with a couple of fair sized clothes closets and a tiny square foyer, comprised the rented floor space for which they paid, to Nevis, a stupendous sum, one that would have covered a two-story house an acre of ground and a garage at home.

The situation on the East Side, the river development. They could have seen the river by stretching their necks and ruining their eyesight had the apartment been nearer the sky. But it was on the third floor. Rents were higher, appropriately, as you mounted upward, or vice versa. "Well," remarked Bill philosophically on the day they had signed the lease, "anyway, if the elevator breaks down we won't have as far to walk as the people who have views. What's a view compared with your health?"

Nevis had found the apartment through the good offices of Fluff Waterford, sister of Sam Burton, who had been Bill's roommate at the university and who had been instrumental in bringing Bill and Nevis to New York. It had been taken for granted for years that Bill was to go into the business of manufacturing lead pipe with his father and his uncle at home. All arranged that he and Nevis would live with his father in the big house on the hill until they could find a cute little place somewhere. But long before graduation Sam had argued hotly against such a plan, far into the night, smoking furious pipes and disheveling his red hair with frantic hands.

SURE OF HIMSELF

"That's an awful note, digging yourself in in a hick town. You'll never get anywhere. Oh, I know you'll inherit the business some day and have what is known as an income. What of it? Meantime you'll get a paunch and a bald spot. What's the sense of burying yourself alive? New York's the only place that matters. You can make good there, Bill. You've got a swell reputation and a lot of friends. My old man will take you in quick as a shot. You could sell Eskimo pies to the Eskimos. Why not bonds to the bloated rich? You'll pick up market tips, you'll make plenty on the side. Be your age and think it over."

Bill had. So had Nevis. Being a woman, she was more cautious, less anxious to be uprooted, but he had persuaded her. He could persuade anyone to almost anything. That was due to his charm and to his integral sincerity. When Bill Lancaster believed anything he believed it so hard that you had to believe with him even against your better judgment.

So after a short honeymoon at Hot Springs here they were. They'd been living at a hotel for a couple of weeks while Fluff and Nevis hunted flats and Bill broke into the bond game through the simple method of joining a couple of clubs and being toted to lunch by Sam and interviewing Sam's dynamic father. "So you think you can make good with us? All right, prove it." Drawing account against commission to start.

RARELY WORRIES

Not that Bill worried much about money. He had against a rainy day his mother's little legacy. And there had been enough presents and checks to furnish the flat. Of course the honeymoon at Hot Springs hadn't been handed to them gratis, on a silver platter, and living in New York hotels isn't exactly free. But in a couple of days he'd sell enough bonds to more than put back what he had abstracted from the principal of the legacy. He should worry. He rarely did, which was one of his most marked characteristics.

Four hours after he had hit his thumb nail with the hammer that Sunday in September, Bill paced solemnly about the floor and surveyed his demesne.

VISIT FLUFF'S PLACE

Fluff, whose nickname describes her with sufficient accuracy, was married to a man twenty years her senior. She lived on Park Avenue, had two children to whom she referred as the hostages, and besides backing a hat shop she took an interest in interior decoration. The Lancasters had dined several times since their arrival in town at Fluff's apartment, eight bedrooms and as many baths, terrace roof garden, drawing-room, studio, library, dining-room and the servants' quarters.

Fluff! She's gone goofy on white walls and black carpets and cross-eyed furniture. Fluff's all right, but me, I like pictures on the walls."

Nevis departed to the kitchenette to inspect the icebox. Bill, she called, "did you get the gin?"

It's out in the hall closet. Got enough limes and oranges?"

"I couldn't get limes, darling, lemons will have to do. Oh," said Nevis, "I'm hungry."

Bill suggested: "Let's go out and eat."

APARTMENT UPSET

Ten minutes later they sat opposite each other at the porcelain kitchen table and consumed scrambled eggs and coffee and grinned at one another cheerfully. "Bill," she told him, "there's a smudge on your nose. You look comic, darling."

Her hair was a dark, untidy wilderness. She had a smudge, too, under her left eye. Her left eye was lovely and almost exactly matched her right. Both were large and dark and decorated by impossible eyelashes. Her brows were fine and alert as the sweep of a bird's wing. Her little face, oval, her nose a suspicion tip-tilted and her generous mouth a healthy red under the more startling scarlet which painted it. Bill, in his shirt sleeves, pushed back his chair and went over to kiss her.

A little later he was dressing, flinging things about the bedroom, discarding collars, hunting socks; nothing was as yet in place. Nothing was, in the area of the apartment, ever to be in place. And he was whistling, fresh from a shower, young blue eyes crinkled to a smile, ruddy bronze face regarding itself in a dressing mirror with wholesome pleasure.

"You ran my bath? Thanks, darling. Where are the bath salts? I had 'em in a glass jar. I reek of anchovies."

Bill, you didn't! Sure you didn't get hold of the starch or the bicarb?" She was in the bathroom. A heavy odor from the tub reassured her. The tub was full of rose-colored water. Nevis giggled resignedly. "Bill, you blessed idiot—all my precious salts. Fluff gave 'em to me; she brought them from Paris. They cost about a million dollars an ounce."

"Well, how did I know how much to use. A teaspoonful?" asked Bill, aggrieved. "Anyway, let's be extravagant. Use a lot more," he advised cheerfully.

BILL PUT TO WORK

He was dressed, new dinner jacket fitting to perfection, and was contemplating his spotless shoes when Nevis reappeared, wrapped in an enormous towel. Her hair was curled tightly over her head.

Bill, for heaven's sake, go out and crack some ice and make yourself useful and let me get dressed. They'll be here any minute now."

Bill left. He was still whistling, strolling into the kitchenette. He tied an apron around him, grinning widely, and gazed lovingly at the trays of ice cubes. Nevis, left alone in a room which had suddenly settled to sufficient and correct proportions with Bill's departure, began dressing under difficulties. She had very little to put on. A soft satin girdle, a lace brassiere, which was an almost superfluous affair in her case, a pair of long flesh colored silken hose; a pair of stilt heeled slippers, a pair of lace-edged step-ins and a slim backless little gown, very severe, very charming, the color of clear flame.

But even this simple procedure was interrupted.

"Where did you put the shaker? Darling, I can't find the silver cocktail glasses! Did you get out the Scotch from my Gladstone? Where are the highball glasses? Can't find the napkins! Shall I use this silver tray Aunt Margaret gave us, the darned thing weighs a ton. Oh, Nevis, come here a minute, will you?"

COMPANY ARRIVES

Nevertheless, she managed to dress and to smooth sweet smelling, quick disappearing cream into face and throat and hands, to powder, to brush her eyebrows and darken her eyelids, to draw a scarlet lipstick over the happy curves of her mouth, to polish her small oval nails, and to appear triumphant in the living-room.

"Do I look all right?" she demanded.

"Bill, you'll ruin my make-up!"

"Bill," shrieked Nevis, and ran to look at herself in the hall mirror . . .

They came in, all talking at once:

"Gee, I'm thirsty!"

"Nevis, what a darling apartment——"

"No, it's a Pennell——"

"Nevis, where did you get that frock?"

"Bill, you've a date with old man Evans tomorrow. Lunch, Bankers' Club. Crab Evans' old man, remember Crab? Eighty-five millions and doesn't think more of his right eye than of a dollar and a quarter. Harder to sell than a Scotch Jew with an Armenian mother."

"May I put my wrap here, Nevis?"

Capes in the bedroom and flung on chairs, sticks rattling in the hall, soft hats on the foyer stand. Hands arranging coiffures. "Where's my powder puff?"

TALK INCESSANTLY

Fluff Waterford, yellow-haired, small, plump, garrulous; her husband, thin to emaciation, with a trick of chewing the waxed ends of his gray moustache; Sam Burton, Fluff's brother, round, rosy, eyes as dark and shiny as black glass; Della and ? or; Hunt, as newly married as their host and hostess, resident out of town but keeping a hotel suite for their frequent urban excursions; Dirk and Frances Carlyle, next door neighbors of the Hunts' on the Island, in their thirties, good looking and so much alike that they might have been brother and sister; Batch Dorgan, a classmate of Sam's and Bill's, an engineer in his father's immense construction company; Marise Norton, Batch's current fiancee, lately stage-struck and looking for a producer.

They sat on chairs, the couch, the arms of things and the floor. The room was blue with smoke in no time. They talked incessantly. After a time they split up into groups. Bill and some of the men occupying the kitchenette, perching on drain board and table, glasses in hand, arguing about the state of the market.

"A mile high. It will go higher——"

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

At the Etna Harris Chapter of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club last Saturday, Manager Morty Henderson gave, as prizes, articles that would make suitable Christmas gifts for members to give their daddies and mothers. The idea went over so big, and the children were so delighted, that other chapters have taken it up and will give similar prizes at the meeting Saturday of this week.

This will be a big help to those boys and girls who have been saving their pennies to buy presents and found they couldn't make them stretch far enough to buy all they would like to buy.

The lobbies of all the Warner Theaters are attractively decorated with Christmas trimmings and Santa Claus will be in the lobby next week to greet boys and girls as they enter the theaters.

The officers of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club constitute the entertainment committee and it is part of their duty to arrange the program for Saturday morning meetings. They are very busy this week preparing Christmas carols, playlets, recitations and songs for the Christmas meeting Saturday.

The winners of the big electric trains at the Mount Oliver Harris Theater Saturday were Helen Miller, 323 Anthony street, and Joseph Leipoldt, both o. Mt. Oliver. Congratulations to Helen and Joseph.

Members of the club are invited to the big free show to be given at all the Warner neighborhood houses, the Davis and the Harris (Diamond street), on Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. Don't forget the date, and don't be late!

BIRTHDAY GREETINGS

GENIUS JOINS STAFF

Will Dash Off Inspirational Poems to Lift Depression.

We are happy to announce that we have completed arrangements whereby H. Epsom Summerthwaite (above) will give us the exclusive rights to publish poetry which he collects from waste baskets in the City Hall during 1932. Mr. Summerthwaite is in complete charge of cleaning up and has discovered some of the most inspired poets in the public's employ. The first find, a veritable nugget, follows:

If the world thinks you're a crook—
Try to yawn,
When you get a dirty look,
Merely yawn,
Though your best friends sneer at you
And your wife and family, too,
There is just one thing to do—
That is yawn,
You can very safely bet
That in time they'll all forget
With a yawn,
For this democratic nation
Does not harbor indignation
And abandons litigation
While you yawn,
So just yawn.

Points of the President's Message

Number SEVEN.

Amplifying a brief allusion in his annual message to postal affairs, Mr. Hoover in a subsequent message to Congress discusses the increasing deficit in the Postoffice Department.

The deficit for 1931 attributable to strictly postal operations was more than $98,000,000. The net deficit for the current year will approximate $150,000,000.

Mr. Hoover thinks the postal deficit for this year ought to be wiped out that the postoffice Department may contribute a fair share in this emergency toward balancing the budget.

The best way to wipe out the 1931 postal deficit is to increase the rate on non-local letter mail FROM TWO CENTS TO THREE CENTS until normal business conditions return.

Mr. Hoover's postmaster general has wisely abandoned his silly proposal of a year ago to fix a 2½-cent rate on letter mail and now recommends the adoption of a 3-cent rate on non-local letter mail.

We have no half-cent coin. There is no reason why we should pretend to have one.

The public would rightly resent being compelled to buy two stamps when only one stamp was needed.

Furthermore, a 2½-cent rate on letter mail would not be sufficient to wipe out the present deficit, but a 3-cent rate would.

And a 3-cent rate would not impair the morale of the army of our faithful postal employes whom we have to thank for whatever is good in our postal service.

These employes share with the mass of their fellow citizens the hardships of this emergency. They have been harassed altogether too much in recent years by ill-advised reorganization.

The public would far prefer to pay temporarily a 3-cent rate on non-local letter mail than to demoralize our postal service by reducing its wages or its personnel.

It costs the government more to deliver a letter going out of town than it does to deliver a local letter. This difference in cost offers a good reason for fixing a 3-cent rate on non-local letter mail until the country returns to normal conditions.

By this simple, straight-forward and sensible temporary increase of only 1 cent in the rate for out of town letter mail, we can show our appreciation of the devoted service we get from our postal employes and wipe out one-sixth of the total deficit which the federal government faces this year.

Congress should promptly adopt the recommendation of the Hoover administration and FIX A 3-CENT RATE FOR NON-LOCAL LETTER MAIL UNTIL THE EMERGENCY IS OVER.

The Lid Is Off!

By Nelson Harding

Off goes the lid, and it is plain
It cannot be put on again
By those who long have held it down
So that the facts should not be known.

Concealment and suppression must
Be from all public matters thrust,
And secrecy be put to flight

Where Senator Norris Is Right

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

Now that Senator Norris has made it plain that he again will push his bill paving the way to a constitutional amendment to end the scandal of lame duck sessions of Congress, the public would do well to make its views known to its representatives in House and Senate. Nothing could be more scandalous than the present system.

A member of the House serves and makes a record; his constituents, whom he is presumed to represent, pass judgment on his record and his votes and repudiate him. This is in November, say, 1930, and the repudiated member goes back to Washington in December, 1930, and continues to misrepresent his people until March 4, 1931. In the absence of a special session, the men elected in November, 1930, are not permitted to propose the measures for which the people voted then until in December, 1931 — 13 months later!

The result is that more than once a Congress rejected by the people has ruled the people in spite of the people for more than a year after its rejection. That is monstrous and certainly un-American.

* * *

How the Old System Works

We had a peculiarly aggravated case last year. Congressman Reeves, of Tennessee, was selected by Mr. Hoover to press his views on Muscle Shoals—the views that are supported by the power combines. Because his constituents thought this a betrayal of the public interest in behalf of the power combines, a fight was made to prevent his renomination by the Republicans in his district.

Mr. Hoover did the unprecedented thing of injecting himself personally into the affairs of one Congressional district in the interest of the tool of the power people, and, even with the Presidential blessing, Reeves barely received the nomination over the opposition. In the election he was overwhelmingly defeated—because of his position on Muscle Shoals.

And what became of Mr. Reeves?

He hurried back to Washington to resume his place in the House after his people had rejected him and to renew his fight on the very proposition which has resulted in his repudiation. Here is a case of the deliberate misrepresentation of the people. His action was an affront to political decency.

This is an especially offensive illustration of how the old system works.

A Disgraceful State of Affairs

Senator Norris believes in representative government. He is so old fashioned as to cling to the Lincolnian conception of this government as a "government of the people, by the people and for the people." He is so antiquated that he believes with Jefferson that the House especially is meant to be immediately responsive to the public will.

Norris wants the new Congress elected for a purpose to be in position to serve that purpose in less than 13 months. Under his plan when the people say that they are through with a Congressman they are through with him. He cannot go back and misrepresent them any more.

It is common knowledge that the lame ducks—the men defeated for re-election—usually seek some appointive office under the President, provided they belong to the President's party. This makes them frequently easy tools of the Executive.

Instead of consulting the wishes of their constituency, or even their own conscience, they turn sycophant and writhe in ecstasy at the feet of the President—expecting to be bought. Often they and their votes have been bought in just this way.

That is a disgraceful state of affairs.

* * *

Norris Deserves To Win

The American press, every thinking man outside congressional circles, are unanimously opposed to the old system. The Norris reform is demanded by public opinion. Time and again Norris has pressed for this reform, but he has been defeated by the pure selfishness of men who care nothing about the public interest so long as they can get a job.

There is not a single reason that can be advanced for the continuance of the system of lame duck legislation. We hope that Norris gets his measure through this winter.

He is a fighter, with the courage of his convictions, with high ideals of public service, and he deserves to win.

* * *

What Makes Norris 'Dangerous'?

For many years Norris has been fighting for reforms, for representative government, and the rights of men. It has now been many years since he caught the fancy of the country in his memorable and successful battle against Joe Cannon and the Cannon rules.

The public wins so seldom that this triumph was unique. In the Senate, to which he was transplanted, he has continued his battles, and now at 71, young as ever in spirit, alert and vigorous as ever, and wiser with the wisdom of the passing years, he is certain to play a conspicuous part in the present session of Congress. In many ways he is unique. He is not a great orator, though a powerful speaker. His power as a speaker comes from his manifest honesty, the evident truth of what he says, and his eloquence is in his earnestness rather than in his rhetoric.

* * *

He does not play to galleries; he does not strut upon the stage; his manner is quiet and modest, and he does not rant. His unusual strength is in the thoroughness of his knowledge and his preparation. He has the mind of an economist and he is a master of research. He does not deal lightly in generalities. He gets down to cases.

That is what makes him "dangerous" to those who are dangerous to the economic rights and liberties of the masses. There are more men in public life whose hearts are right, whose impulses are right and whose intentions are right than the country generally supposes. But unhappily most of these, intuitively knowing what is right and wrong, are unable to sustain themselves in debate. There are brains on the side of the exploiters of the people; and they cannot be fought with generalizations, however true they are.

The only way to bring them down is with the bullets of facts. No one manufactures for use more bullets of facts than George Norris.

* * *

A Lying, Scurrilous Article

That is the reason the Pulitzer committee last spring lowered itself into a sewer to give the prize for the best editorial of the year to a lying, scurrilous article "not fit for the company of gentlemen" against Norris. It was crude, stupid, and largely composed of misrepresentations and falsehoods. It had no literary merit of any sort. But it got the prize because partisan politicians of the Pulitzer committee, who have been guilty of playing cheap party politics with their awards before, thought this would be a pin prick for George Norris.

It reflected only on the committee. It made its contribution to the attempt to belittle the man who is not afraid to fight the battle of the people; but it was a pee-wee contribution measuring the minds of those who made it.

It was on a par with the attempt to defeat Norris by resorting to the filthy tactics of the campaign of 1928; and the attempt to confuse the people of Nebraska by hiring an obscure grocer of the same name to run against him.

George Norris is not of our party; but he is the kind of man that people trust and respect because of the enemies they have made.

A Great Slaughter

There Is Much to Think About in the History of This Year's Deer Hunt.

The open season for deer hunting in Pennsylvania closed Tuesday night. The Board of Game Commissioners estimates that 54,000 deer were killed—an unprecedented number.

The slaughter shows what can be done by intelligent conservation. Twenty-five years ago wild deer were on the verge of extinction in Pennsylvania. They were brought back by a carefully thought out plan.

To Councilman John M. Phillips, of Pittsburgh, more than to any other man, belongs the credit for this remarkable accomplishment.

Forty-one hunters were accidentally killed and many others wounded. The casualties exceed the football fatalities for the whole country. What can be done to make deer hunting safe? Gov. Pinchot proposes that the use of high-powered rifles be forbidden. It will not be easy to get either the hunters or the Legislature to consent.

Three men who killed a deer near Emporium on Sunday evening were sentenced to serve 500 days in jail, in lieu of a fine of $500 each. The fine may or may not be a just penalty. There can be no question that imprisonment for 500 days in lieu of the fine is excessive. The rate of a day in jail for every dollar of fine should be changed.

Seventy-one deer were killed in Allegheny County. Let us hope that some of the graceful animals escaped to add interest to the woods back of Sewickley and other places near Pittsburgh.

Good Cheer in Coal

Depression started in the soft coal industry six years before hard times became general, and has gone farther than in other branches of commerce.

Yet a surprisingly optimistic tone marks some of the papers read at the forty-fifth annual meeting of the Coal Mining Institute of America, now in session here.

In the presidential address J. W. Paul showed no enthusiasm for government operation or control, saying "the remedies are within the province of the owners and, if left with them, no doubt a solution will be found, since the present competition has brought them to a state where the survival of the fittest has begun to operate."

That suggests that the jungle law of "dog eat dog," which has so long prevailed, has at last resulted in the elimination of the weak companies and that the survivors will be able to take care of themselves.

Impressive, too, was the emphasis placed by Newell G. Alford on the necessity for helping coal miners to get better wages. That looks as if the operators believed they had at last reached rock bottom.

Outside Help Needed

County Detectives Should Destroy Slot Machines Which City Police Ignore.

The county detectives have been doing good work in destroying gambling slot machines.

In Pittsburgh the police have ignored the machines. Two have been in operation in a store next to the Carrick Police Station. One of the machines stood yesterday on a low box where it would be within comfortable reach of a small child. Children from a nearby school are tempted daily.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—Dapper George White has become the Rialto's "prima donna." Fighting up from messenger to hoofer and from hoofer to astute showmanship he has, in his new affluence, become one of the fiery figures of an ultra-explosive profession.

His pyrotechnics are not affectation but the real thing. As was evidenced recently when, while a first night audience streamed in, he stood in his lobby toe to toe, exchanging slugs with a former associate. He cuts dead those for whom he has a grievance—real or imaginary.

There is no doubt that the lad who once "busked" for pitched pennies is one of the smartest showmen of his day. His extravaganzas are large, handsome prize blooms, and despite his fussiness and Shavian contentiousness, his infatuation for the theater is complete.

He is always rehearsing new dance steps, nightly selling tickets in his own boxoffice, pepping up the show with barks from the wings and at times even serving as usher. It is perhaps this thoroughness that makes him fly into rage at criticism from the outside.

White has few intimates. For years he was constantly in the company of Lou Holtz, but differences arose and they now coolly. Lately he is seen with Micky Blair, night club impresario. Another occasional companion is the lady he calls "Penny," the coy Ann Pennington.

Out of a love affair of yesteryear, they salvaged a firm and understanding friendship. But mostly White travels alone, and about him is the despair of one acquiring a sudden contempt for his kind. Even on his youthful face are etched bitter wrinkles in acid.

His achievement this sagging season has become typical. He opened his show in Atlantic City with a flop as resounding as a surf beat. Three weeks later in New York it was a roaring hit. It was the same with his first production—a miserable mess that galvanized into a smash.

* * *

The town buzzes with the abrupt banishment of a confirmed social pest from the Casino by Sidney Solomon, the manager. For years he has been the officious upstart, cluttering up first nights, etc., with his brand of showing off. His capers on the dance floor did not please Solomon and he asked him to leave. Running over to Mayor Walker at another table the pest inquired: "Did you see that?" Mayor Walker replied coolly: "I did, and you better heed it and study yourself. It's time you found out you are the most unpopular fellow in all this town."

These depressing enough days should restrain superstitious circulating good luck chain letters, threatening calamity to those not copying them and increasing the nuisance. But every mail increases them. If the world were governed by such freakish idiocy most of us would like to quit it.

Roxy is installed in his new apartment in the monumental crag that occupies the site of the old Hotel Majestic. He is spread over 14 rooms, with a balcony running the entire length and overlooking the wind-swept grandeur of Central Park. Like most New Yorkers he has concentrated on his bathroom. It is entirely of glass, floors, ceiling and fixtures, and is twice the size of, well say, Robert Garland's bedroom if he had a big bedroom. The miniature bar is immediately adjoining the master's bedroom, which offers an original idea. You know, fall right into bed. The decorations are in what might be Early Roxy.

A pressing telephone call just now was from a friend I asked to assist in a charity, upon the committee of which I had been asked to serve. "You are asking me?" he slanged. "Listen, flop ears, I not only lost everything I had but all my wife had, too, in a pretty new office building that is still awaiting the first customer. And today, if you care for another helping of gloom, my salary was unboomed."

And to my notion "unbooming a salary" is the best description of the month.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

You had a tail before you were born.

It was a soft, weak affair and while you wore it you looked like a diminutive pollywog. Nevertheless it was an honest-to-goodness tail . . . as real a tail as any puppy ever sprouted.

You tucked your tail inside your skin before you were born, but its skeleton still remains within your body. Your spinal column ends in small, rounded bones. They are the skeleton of your tail.

Some tails refuse to be tucked away. Every now and then a tailed baby is born. There is a record of a 10-inch human tail. Human tails are usually invisible—that is, the tail bones do not continue outside the body. But regular Fido tails are known, fully equipped with bones, nerves, muscles, blood vessels and hair! We all have vestiges of the muscles which used to wag our tails!

You have other vestiges in your bodies which tell more of this strange story.

That little point in the flap of your ear—

Your floating ribs—

Your appendix—

The pad on the side of your hand—

These things are all vestiges of bodies which human beings once used, but which have been discarded in the course of our development.

Once upon a time, man was a tailed thing all through his life. He did not abandon that tail when he was born. He used it during the life he spent in the ooze and slime of creation's dawn. Then, as he crawled out of the ooze, he ceased to need his tail—developed other needs. And his body changed and adapted itself to meet those needs. But always little scraps and tags of the old body remained . . . hang-overs from those other lives.

You were born just a little while ago—in 1911—in 1895. But your unseen tail and that hair in your eyebrows were born millions of years ago in a prehistoric swamp in some primeval jungle.

You have other hang-overs from those old lives—mental hang-overs.

Fear. We've managed to hide our jungle tails, but our jungle fear is still going strong. Jungle fear and greed, hate and lust, they're still in us . . . cringing and snarling . . . prowling and sneaking . . . lunging their bloody claws and slobbering jaws through the thin veneer of our civilizations.

You've felt them. That sudden savagery inside you—that sudden savagery inside you—so unlike your careful, Twentieth century self. It is unlike your Twentieth century self—but it isn't unlike all those other selves which lived in the long ago jungle centuries.

Next time you feel yourself swelling with pride over your own performance, touch that tab on your ear—feel that hair in your eyebrow—REMEMBER YOUR TAIL.

And remember it especially when you start to judge the other fellow's silliness or viciousness. Upon him, too, is the mark of the jungle.

IF YOU EXCUSE YOUR OWN TAIL, YOU MUST ALSO EXCUSE HIS.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

"Sex" Takes a Holiday

The platinum lining to the cloud of depression is the passing of the sex-mania into second (or is it forty-second) place. Who ever hears of Flaming Youth, flappers and sex-appeal, these days?

* * *

Even sex-novels have taken to the back-shelf and given place to mystery stories and tales of adventure. It takes something stronger than a tawdry scene in an exotic pink boudoir to make a man forget that he lost his savings in Wall Street, or that the rent is due tomorrow or that the grocer will give him no more credit.

And, as Agnes Smith, points out in an article entitled "There Never Was a Mrs. Sherlock Holmes," sex has no place in a mystery story. No super-detective (in fiction) ever lost his head, fell in love or got married.

* * *

Oh sweet, refreshing thought! Just THINK of the thrilling and exciting things in this world, in which sex plays no part!

* * *

There is no sex, for instance, in a plum-pudding. Yet a plum-pudding is full of thrills and surprises! There is no sex appeal in a good dinner or a hot mince pie or a foaming beaker of egg-nogg, or a good after-dinner cigar.

* * *

There is lots of excitement in Christmas shopping—but it has no sex-lure. Neither has the fascinating pastime of making a rock garden or of painting the kitchen furniture. Or trimming the Christmas tree.

There is no sex in running for Congress or in taking Junior to the circus. There is no sex in politics or in a radio or an exciting football game or a marathon or a prizefight or a horse race.

* * *

Of course, in the Jazz Age, when Freud and his like had us all talking "sex," there were lots of discerning souls who could find a sex-motif in spinach—or the Congressional Record. Or the Elsie books.

* * *

But now we are up against SERIOUS things. And we've suddenly discovered that "sex," per se, has no more glamor than cranberry-sauce without turkey! It's just a part of the ensemble. A side-dish on the fascinating menu of life. And now we're rather FED UP with it! Thank heaven, nobody has written a book on "The Sex-Life of Santa Claus!"

TWO WHITAKER POLICE RESIGN IN SHAKEUP

Wholesale Changes Expected As Aftermath of Election As Haynes Takes Control

A prelude to wholesale changes in the Whitaker police department when the newly-organized council takes office next month was seen this week with the resignation of two members of the department. They were Earl Aston, department chief for the last two years and Patrolman Emil Peterson.

Both men are said to have opposed the political faction that was successful in the November elections. The defeated candidates for Council were President Samuel Hull, William Carney and Charles McGeevey.

Burgess James Haynes' re-election, together with the victory of Councilmen-elect Harry Brinker, Michael Winters and James Witherspoon, places Haynes in control of the borough's political life.

Burgess Haynes' forces were defeated in the primary election but strengthened their organization and gained a landslide in the general election.

With the three new members, A. A. Ackerman was elected Justice of the Peace, August Bamford, Constable, and Logan Wilding and William Howell, school directors.

PITT MID-YEAR GRADUATIONS CANCELED

February Exercises Halted For Economy; Students To Get Diplomas in June

Carrying out a program of economy, the University of Pittsburgh will not hold a mid-year convocation in February for students graduating at that time, it has been announced by Chancellor John G. Bowman.

This move was taken, according to Dr. Bowman, because of the effort and expense entailed and because it would permit of more concentration on the spring convocation.

It was pointed out that the decision does not establish a precedent, but is in the nature of an experiment.

Students graduating in February may receive their diplomas at the office of the registrar or may wait until the spring commencement exercises which will be held June 8.

CASTOFFS HELP IN RECLAIMING JOBLESS

Salvation Army Industrial Home in Lawrenceville Gives Work, Shelter, Food

Cast-offs both in clothing and men are brought together in one of the most successful movements of rehabilitation in Allegheny County, the Salvation Army Industrial Home, Plummer and Home streets, Lawrenceville.

Here men past 60 who have missed their mark in the world are being reclaimed according to Brig. Franz Duerr, in charge of Western Pennsylvania headquarters of the social service department of the Army. They are being reclaimed he explains by reclaiming wornout clothing and other articles that are given to the Army by residents of the district.

During the past 12 months this home has supplied 3,744 days work to unemployed men, 74,446 meals and 23,592 nights' lodging.

One hundred men have made the home their own. By their labor, they repair everything that is donated to the home and help distribute it to needy families.

In explaining the organization of the home, Brig. Duerr said:

"These social operations are supported entirely by the waste materials such as old newspapers, magazines, rags, furniture and old clothing that the Army trucks and wagons collect from door to door. Not one cent of the funds raised in Pittsburgh for the maintenance of the family welfare relief is used for this work. I therefore, make a special appeal that Pittsburghers save their waste material and thereby enable the Army to continue this work."

BOROUGH, RAIL OFFICIALS TO CONFER

Council Members to Discuss Discontinuance of Service On Express Route No. 63

Three East borough councils are expected to confer with officials of the Pittsburgh Railways Company next month on the discontinuance of service on street car route 63, known as the Trafford Express. The boroughs affected are Trafford, Pitcairn and Forest Hills.

Suggestion that the boroughs appoint committees to meet with the street car company was made in a letter addressed to the councils by F. R. Cogswell, director of traffic promotion. It explained that Cogswell, W. H. Boyce and J. B. Donley, director of public relations, would receive the committees.

Selection of the borough representatives probably will not be made before January when the new councils convene.

"By eliminating the express the company is not just following a 'hit or miss' proposition in removing service on any past routes. Since improvement of the roads and the increase of the privately-owned autos, only six per cent of the total traffic on the route was traffic between Pittsburgh and Trafford. Only three per cent of this traffic was between Trafford and points beyond East Pittsburgh."

BONDS END DEBT IN N. BRADDOCK

North Braddock will liquidate its debts which have accumulated over a three-year period by the sale of $170,000 worth of bonds which were authorized by Council last week. The borough secretary reported collections of $1,303.58, and the treasurer reported a balance on hand of $60,606.89.

The ordinance authorizing the bond issue was introduced by Joseph F. Mayhuge, borough solicitor.

It was pointed out at the meeting that no new construction work will be undertaken with the money realized from the bond sale.

Sale of the bonds will be made next spring.

EAST END DANCE TO AID NEEDY

Needy families of the East End district will receive Christmas baskets as a result of a benefit dance and floor show to be given by the Violet Ray Club, of East Liberty Tuesday night at Webster Hall. The club is composed of employes of the Enright Theater who are also members of Boy Scout troops.

Receipts from the dance will be used by the club's charity committee in preparing baskets of food and clothing which they will distribute to the needy. The committee includes William F. Weimer, president of the club; Paul Cunningham, Archie Beacom, William Bell.

James Levey, shortstop of the St. Louis Browns, will be master of ceremonies, and Marty Irwin will direct the musical entertainment. "Doc" Ashcom and "Gus" Miller are handling ticket sales.

OFFICIALS DINE IN TRAFFORD

Members of Trafford's official family will be entertained tonight at a dinner in Feigert restaurant. They will number 44 and will include members of council, constables, police department and justices of the peace. The dinner will mark the installation of department officers.

Speakers will be Burgess Elmer Henderson and Solicitor Treasher. Raymond Detrick, newly-elected president of council, will be toastmaster.

Wilkinsburg Church Minister Ordained

The Rev. Dr. Thomas Hill Carson was ordained to the priesthood at St. Stephen's Episcopal parish, Wilkinsburg, Sunday morning. Dr. Alexander Mann, bishop of Pittsburgh, was the celebrant and the Rev. Dr. William Porkess presented the candidate for ordination.

Dr. Carson is a former Wilkinsburg resident and a member of St. Stephen's parish, being the fifth member of the parish to be ordained during Dr. Porkess' pastorate. Dr. Carlson is at present minister in charge of the mission stations at Donora and Clairton.

J. J. House, Former Braddock Man, Dead

Funeral services were held Sunday for John J. House, 82, former Braddock resident, who died Friday at his home in Layton, Pa. Mr. House conducted a merchandising business in Layton a short while before his death. He is survived by two brothers and three sisters, Mrs. Emma Baughman, Camp avenue, Braddock; Mrs. A. D. Montgomery, Camp avenue, Braddock; George F. House, Wilmerding; Oliver H. House, Lobinger avenue, Braddock, and Mrs. Elizabeth Hoffman, Methodist Home at Mt. Lebanon.

Chef de Gare Glenn B. James, of Voiture Locale No. 8, 40 and 8, and his staff also will attend.

Father Cox to Lead Disabled Vets' Meet

The Rev. James R. Cox, pastor of Old St. Patrick's Church, will conduct a mass meeting of disabled war veterans to be held Sunday at the church. The meeting is under the auspices of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War, of which Father Cox is state publicity chairman.

Children's Theater To Give Fairy Play

The Children's Theater will present its first production of the present season, "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," December 30 in the Morris Kaufmann Memorial Auditorium at the Y. M. & W. H. A.

The adult roles are being acted by Stephanie Diamond, Arthur Dunling, Lydia Patterson, Norman Porter and Helen Sisenwain. Mrs. Jerome Katz is in charge of the production.

Dr. Louis H. Evans Installed as Pastor

The Rev. Dr. Louis H. Evans, successor to the Rev. W. L. McEwan as pastor of the Third Presbyterian Church, Fifth and South Negley avenues, preached his initial sermon at that church Sunday. His subject at the morning service was "The Pulpit's Message" and at the evening service, "What Are You Living For?"

Dr. Evans, formerly of Pomona, Cal., was formally installed as pastor last night.

FORMER SCOUTS 'CARRY ON'

Fourteen years ago a group of East End school girls organized Troop 4, Girl Scouts of America with headquarters in the Emory Methodist Episcopal Church, Highland avenue.

Other troops formed at the same time have come and gone as the girls arrived at the age limit. But not so with Troop 4.

Its 25 members simply banded together as a bridge club when they were too old for Girl Scouting. Although many of them now are married, they continue to meet every month. Instead of woodcraft, they are now studying contract bridge.

Wilkinsburg Pastor Takes New Post Despite Pleas

The Rev. Luther A. Krouse, pastor of the Calvary Lutheran Church of Wilkinsburg, will accept a call to the pastorate of the historic Emmanuel Lutheran Church, Pottstown, Pa., January 5, he has announced, despite protests by his congregation and the refusal of its board to accept his resignation.

Since taking over his charge in Wilkinsburg in April, 1928, Dr. Krouse has increased its membership by about 300. Attendance at Sunday school has increased from 325 to 400.

Dr. Krouse came to Wilkinsburg from the Lutheran Church of Ringeway, Pa.

The Pottstown church has a membership of 1,500. It was founded in 1765. Its pastor, the Rev. Dr. I. B. Kurtz, resigned recently on account of ill health after serving for 34 years.

Vet Auxiliary to Provide Free Milk for Schools

Ladies' Auxiliary of the Lost Comrades Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Wilmerding, will launch a program to furnish free milk to undernourished children in the schools of Wilmerding, Wall and East McKeesport, January 4. This announcement was made by Mrs. Thomas Moore, president, at the regular meeting of the veterans' post.

Distribution of the milk will cost approximately $33 a month, according to Mrs. Moore. Following her explanation of the plan, the post voted to contribute $100 to the milk fund.

The auxiliary, it was reported, has decided to give up their meeting room in the Philaretic hall in order to devote the rent money to the milk fund.

JAMES LEMMER ELIGIBLE AT WILKINSBURG

Basketball Star Given Reinstatement by W. P. I. A. L. Decisions Committee

By JULIUS LEVIN

Wilkinsburg's chances for the Section XI championship of the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League basketball race have been enhanced greatly with the announcement that James Lemmer, who was declared ineligible at the tag end of last year's campaign, had been given a clean slate of health by the league's governing body.

The Red and Blue basketball team under the coaching of Homer Cox will one of the greatest cage, football and [illegible] ever developed in the district was [illegible] a determined fight for [illegible] section crown last season when the greenish body [illegible] Lemmer ineligible because of the residence rule which requires an athlete to attend school five calendar months before competing in sports.

Although Lemmer's parents did not reside in Wilkinsburg he was a student in its schools. He attended grammar grade and high school in Wilkinsburg but this fact did not alter the league's ruling. As a result of the decision last winter all games won by Wilkinsburg were thrown out and its chances for the title ruined.

The return of Lemmer to the squad gives the Cardinals a veteran performer who should add considerable strength to the Wilkinsburg quintet. Wilkinsburg competes in the same section as Aspinwall, Edgewood, Etna, Oakmont, Sharpsvale and Verona, all noted for the caliber of basketball teams turned out in those towns.

Anent Washington

Foxy Miller, former University of Pittsburgh quarterback and now coach at Turtle Creek Union High School, believes Hank Day's Little Presidents of Washington High School was the strongest scholastic grid machine meshed together in Western Pennsylvania in more than a decade.

"Washington, despite the fact that it finished third in the fight for the W. P. I. A. L. due to the point system, was without doubt the smoothest working machine in Western Pennsylvania," Miller said in reviewing the past football season.

"Hank Day's team was one of those outfits every coach has dreams of developing and I don't think there was an eleven in the district that could have taken its measure."

When it is taken into consideration that Miller's Turtle Creek Union eleven had taken a drubbing at the hands of the Little Presidents, his opinion should carry much weight.

Miller now has turned his attention to turning out a winning basketball team. He will have to rebuild his quintet as Chamberlain is the only regular back from last season. However, Miller has obtained some promising candidates from the various teams engaged in class basketball. Turtle Creek Union opens its league season in Section VIII on January 5 with Rankin as its opponent at Turtle Creek.

School Notes

John Irwin's Taylor Allderdice passers added a lot of prestige to its record by the manner in which it defeated the powerful Pitt Freshman quintet by a two-point margin. The Squirrel Hill quintet should make a strong bid for the Section 1 crown of the City League.

Revenge will be the objective of Ed Paulie's Swissvale High aggregation when it engages Jim Hudson's Braddock floor machine at Swissvale tomorrow. Braddock won the first game by a 26-24 score. Tuesday finds Rankin at Swissvale.

Two tough games face Johnny Reed's Scott High quintet this week-end. The state interscholastic champions play in New Castle tomorrow night and in Erie on Saturday.

Bill Campbell's Homestead High quintet will entertain Braddock tonight at Homestead. The two teams are natural rivals and should present an interesting duel.

Coach Carroll's Wilkinsburg High team plays two games this week. Friday the Wilkinsburgers play Coach Henry's Duquesne quintet at Duquesne and Saturday finds them in Avalon.

Peabody High School is included on the Farrell High floor schedule. The East Enders play in the Shenango Valley town on January 9.

Eleanor Steiner To Wed January 7

Miss Eleanor Steiner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Steiner, of Murray avenue, formerly of New Kensington, has selected January 7 as the date for her marriage to Jack Becher, son of Mrs. A. Old Connecticut Grist Mill
This old mill was built in 1645 in Connecticut by the son of John Winthrop. Just as the force of the wind made the power for the Dutch windmills, so the great undershot water wheel turned the machinery for grinding the grain. This particular mill was also used as a home.
Scientific knowledge blended with a complete appreciation of our responsibility enables us to serve efficiently and unobtrusively.
